Managing risk and getting insurance with the right broker is as important as selecting the right lawyer or accountant.

"The reopening of Hunt & Fish Club and NYC has been challenging and emotional. Throughout the process, I became very reliant on others to eliminate roadblocks and help clear the path. The Whitmore Agency was a significant part of that process.... and for that I'm extremely grateful. I look forward to continuing this relationship as we all collectively rebuild."

Hampton Bays Sewage Plant Plan Debate Continues

BY KATHERINE PLOTAS

Hampton Bays residents recently renewed their objections to the Town of Southampton's ongoing plans to build a sewage treatment plant in the community.

The town has been planning to build a sewage treatment plant at 30 Cemetery Road for years. But residents are concerned about its proximity to Good Ground Park and the Good Ground Cemetery.

"My own family is buried there," said one of several residents opposed to the plant's construction.

Town officials said inspections have found no environmental problems with the property, no wetlands or shallow groundwater and the soil conditions are good for construction. The location is not within a special Groundwater Protection Area, Central Pine Barrens or any other critical environmental areas.

Regardless, neighbors remain concerned about the stigma, aesthetics and potential for spills that come with living next to a municipal wastewater treatment facility.

The issue came as the town board authorized

Suffolk Reaches Settlements With 'Big Three' Drug Companies

BY BRIANA BONFIGLIO

Suffolk County officials ushered in another settlement in the ongoing litigation with pharmaceutical companies over their roles in the opioid crisis on Long Island.

The three largest drug distributors, McKesson Corp, Cardinal Health Inc, and AmerisourceBergen Corp, will dole out at least $86 million to each county over 18 years, which officials said would go straight toward drug treatment and prevention.

"We've been working on this issue at an extraordinary cost," said Suffolk County Executive Steve Bellone. "These dollars can never replace who has been lost and the families that have been devastated ... but it will help lift the burden off taxpayers, bring some relief and hold (drug companies) accountable."

Bellone said that Suffolk would likely end up with about $120 million from all settlements and will convene a committee to allocate the dollars toward various drug abuse programs.

This is the largest opioid settlement in United States history and comes just as drug distributors are set to pay more than $1 billion to New York and billions nationwide in lawsuits over opioids.

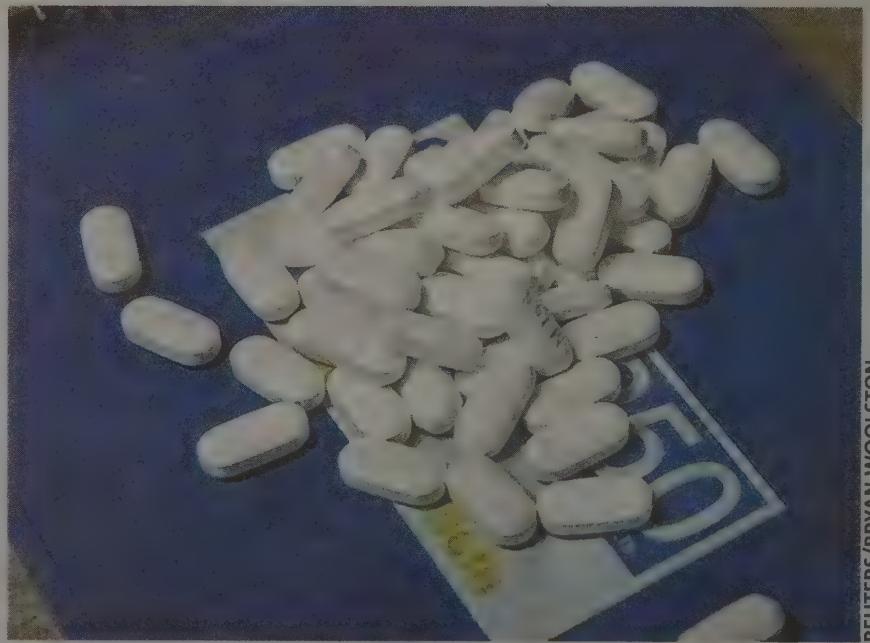

The deal with New York Attorney General Letitia James, Suffolk and Nassau counties came three weeks into the first jury trial accusing companies of profiting from a flood of addictive painkillers that devastated communities. That trial is being held at Central Islip federal court.

"While no amount of money will ever compensate for the millions of addictions, the hundreds of thousands of deaths or the countless communities decimated by opioids, this money will be vital in preventing any future devastation," James said.

In a joint statement, the distributors called the settlement "an important step toward finalizing a broad settlement with states, counties and political subdivisions."

Nearly 500,000 people died from opioid overdoses in the United States from 1999 to 2019, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. And the crisis appeared to have worsened during the COVID-19 pandemic.

TABLETS OF THE OPIOID-BASED HYDROCODONE AT A PHARMACY IN PORTSMOUTH, OHIO, JUNE 21, 2017.

The CDC last week said provisional data showed that 2020 was a record year for drug overdose deaths with 93,331, up 29% from a year earlier. Opioids were involved in 74.7%, or 69,710, of those fatalities.

Shinnecock Powwow Canceled This Year

The Shinnecock Indian Nation's annual Powwow has been canceled for the second year in a row due to the ongoing coronavirus pandemic.

The Powwow, which is typically held over Labor Day weekend on the Shinnecock's reservation in Southampton, is a celebration of the tribe's culture and community.

The Shinnecock Indian Nation will be filming and streaming what little events are still in place, but the territory will be closed to visitors this year.

PMBC Gets Level 3 Trauma Certification

BY WHITNEY LYNN

North Fork residents can feel a little safer now that Peconic Bay Medical Center in Riverhead has received a Level III Trauma Center Certification.

The American College of Surgeons (ACS) Committee on Trauma verification means that PBMC proved its ability to address the trauma needs of all injured patients.

"Previously, East End residents had to travel further than anyone else in the tri-state area for trauma care," said Dr. Amy E. Loeb, the center's executive director. "This achievement is a testament to the quick response of our medical team and the result of our ongoing commitment to providing our patients with the world-class medical excellence they deserve."

Cutting down the time it takes to get critical patients to treatment is guaranteed to save lives, officials said. The staff is ready 24/7 in case of an emergency.

PBMC is equipped with an advanced-technology Cardiac Cath Lab, called Kanas Regional Heart Center. The Cardiac Cath Lab opened their doors in 2017 and has continued to be at the forefront of cardiac technological advancements.

Additionally, Peconic Bay Medical Center is home to an award-winning stroke center. The stroke treatment center received the Gold Plus Quality Achievement Award from the American Heart Association.

Whale of a Boating Tale

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

A Montauk-based fisherman reportedly believes his boat was struck by a whale, sending a friend overboard and knocking a hole in the vessel off the coast of Block Island on July 11.

Bill Speth was fishing with three friends when the collision occurred and the man overboard landed on the whale, multiple New England-based news outlets reported.

"We knew the whales were around, but it was just crazy," Speth told WJAR-TV in Connecticut.

The U.S. Coast Guard responded and towed the boat to shore without incident.

Whales are a common sight in the waters south of Block Island, but it is rare to hear of one hitting a boat. Most such collisions occur when boats hit whales. Experts say boaters should turn off their engines and drift if they see whales in the area.

The incident comes a month after a lobster diver said he survived being swallowed by a whale off the coast of Cape Cod.

A Lawsuit:

Company Not Hired by East Hampton to Regulate Parking Sues

BY DAN RATTINER

Parking in East Hampton Village is now being administered by computer. You can park anywhere you want and you don't need a parking sticker. But if you leave your car standing for more than 2 hours, the computer will catch you and send you a ticket if, beforehand, you have not downloaded the parking app and entered your info to agree to pay the approximately $10 extra-hour fee. It's a whole lot cheaper than paying the parking ticket, which could run you close to $100. Notably, if you are a Village resident and have put your sacred Village resident sticker in your car side window beforehand, the fee and the ticket, if any, are waived. So actually, you do not need the app.

Turns out there are several competing services that offer this business. And it turns out that one of them, which the Village stopped using, is suing the Village for nearly $100,000.

What happened is this: During summer 2020, the Village officials looked into the offerings of several computer firms, looking ahead to the summer of 2021 when they intended to put all this into effect. One of these firms was Tannery Creek Systems. Indeed, the Village officials liked what was offered and at the end of last summer, signed a contract with them to begin the service in May 2021.

After a couple of weeks of service, however, the Village officials changed their minds about using Tannery Creek. What they hadn't counted on when they signed the agreement was the appearance of the vehicle that would drive around downtown every day scanning the license plates and transmitting the data up to Albany to find out who owned what and for how long, and whether where the vehicle was parked was in compliance with the rules or not.

East Hampton Village is noted for its peaceful appearance. Flowers are everywhere. There are two town greens, one at each end of Main Street. At one is a wooden 18th-century wooden windmill 40 feet high. At the other is Town Pond with ducks and swans paddling this way and that. In between are several 17th-century saltbox homes and two other wooden windmills.

The vehicle that Tannery Creek put on the job is adorned with enough flashlights, computer laser guns and motion sensors to make itself look very angry. On one side in the rear there is even a long tube with chalk on the end. Press a button on the dashboard and the tube swings down and makes a mark on a tire. It's got everything. And in big letters on each side, it says "Parking Enforcement."

In towns where crime is running rampant and a lot of people are shooting at each other, this thing would fit right in. But here? From the get-go, the powers felt that something would have to be done, and that this thing was not in keeping with the image that the Village would like to promote.

"That vehicle looked like a monster," East Hampton Village Mayor Jerry Larsen said.

After a little back-and-forth with the company about this, a decision was made by the Village to cancel the agreement they had made with Tannery Creek. They contacted another firm. That firm had a more unobtrusive vehicle to offer. They'd go with that firm.

Tannery Creek allowed that the Village was within its rights to cancel their contract. But in something like the phrase "It's a joy to look at and a pleasure to hold, but if you break it then it is sold," the firm announced they would not take their loony-tunes SUV back. The firm's attorneys stated in legal documents, "The Village utilized the equipment for two months."

REUTERS

DIRECTOR OF THE MOVIE PAUL FEIG POSES NEXT TO ECTO-1, THE VEHICLE USED IN THE 2016 "GHOSTBUSTERS" REBOOT, DURING A PHOTO-CALL AT SONY STUDIOS IN CULVER CITY, CALIFORNIA MARCH 2, 2016.

And when East Hampton Village officials declined a second time to keep it, Tannery Creek filed a lawsuit for $48,860, the cost of parking monitoring equipment still owed by the Village, plus $100,000 in damages. And that's where the matter stands.

At the present time, the vehicle is parked in one of the Village-owned lots with all its doodads and horns still on it.

Lawsuits can be expensive. Because of that, I suggest that the Village keep this vehicle. All they need do is change the lettering on the side. Remove "Parking Enforcement." In its place write "Ghostbusters." And once a month, maybe on the first of every month, take it out and drive it around town so as to keep the town free of ghosts. It can be done.

Better than that, make an event out of it. Park it inside the Gardiner Mill. Gardiner Mill is one of the three English windmills in town, about halfway between one end of town and the other. The ghostbusters truck, with 6 inches to spare, will fit inside. And then, in Groundhog Day fashion, or better yet, in cuckoo-clock fashion, have a crowd on hand when the doors are opened, the sirens are sounded and the ghostbuster truck is let out for its one-day-a-month snoop through town.

By the way, nobody can park in the Village lots for 4 hours or more without getting a ticket – even Village residents.

For some reason, this story brings to mind the second year of the Hamptons International Film Festival in 1994. This was 27 years ago. I was standing out front of the East Hampton Cinema just before sunset when a young woman on a giant tricycle appeared amidst the traffic going eastbound and heading toward us. She was a beautiful young person and she wore a skintight silver suit with spangles and a pair of 4-foot-long diaphanous wings attached to her back. With every push on the pedals of her bicycle, these wings would flap up and down. Pedal, flap, pedal, flap. But then she was forced to pull over and stop right in front of the theater. A policeman had brought her to a halt.

"What do you think you are doing, little lady?" he asked.

"I'm promoting a movie," she breathlessly replied.

"Well, you just turn your little self around and flap your way back out of town the way you came in," the officer said.

And she did.

THE PECONIC IS KNOWN FOR ITS FRESH SCALLOPS.

Strained Scallops: Feds Declare Peconic Scallop Fishery a Disaster, But Signs of Life Emerge

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

Federal officials recently declared the Peconic Bay scallop fishery collapse a disaster, but marine biologists surveying the waterway believe that the shellfish are rebounding to their highest level in more than a decade.

It's too soon to tell how well the larval scallops will survive into adulthood, and they likely won't be grown in time for the fall harvest season. But it's a ray of hope after last year's collapse of the Peconic Bay scallop fishery, which was devastating news for the environment, the baymen who rely on that shellfish harvest for a living and local restaurants that serve scallops.

"Surveys of larval set show the highest level of set in 15 years," says Chris Smith, senior educator of natural resources with the Cornell Cooperative Extension's Marine Program. "At this point they are very small and have 18 months to go before [they are] harvested. Impossible to predict their fate at this time, but it's a good sign."

The scallop season usually starts in November, but the scallop die-off last year—the second in two years—shocked the East End. The Peconic Estuary stretches from the shores of Riverhead to the tips of the Twin Forks. Biologists have blamed the die-off on rising water temperatures and a parasite found in the kidneys of adult and juvenile scallops.

"The discovery of a protozoan parasite in bay scallops from Peconic Bay represents a significant threat to this commercially important fishery," New York State Department of Environmental Conservation Commissioner Basil Seggos had said.

Dr. Stephen Tettelbach, a shellfish ecologist from the CCE, and his researchers have found similar indicators of issues that led to the deaths of the previous scallop population. Surveys conducted showed that 95% of the bay scallops died last year. Officials hatched a plan to try to restore the scallop fishery.

"We will continue to lead innovative programs to improve water quality and restore valuable shellfish populations," Gov. Andrew Cuomo stated in a letter issued to the U.S. Department of Commerce when he requested the disaster declaration last year.

As a result, last month the U.S. Secretary of Commerce Gina M. Raimondo declared the Peconic Bay scallop fishery collapse a disaster—one of four in three states declared at the same time, including two salmon fisheries in Washington and a king crab fishery in Alaska. The declaration makes federal aid available to the baymen who rely on the scallops for their livelihood.

NEWS & VIEWS

THE PECONIC RIVER IN RIVERHEAD AT THE MOUTH OF THE PECONIC BAY.

"Fisheries are essential to our communities and economy and we want to ensure America is in a position to remain competitive on the global stage," Raimondo said. "These determinations allow us to lend a helping hand to the fishing families and communities that have experienced very real and difficult setbacks in the last few years."

The agency works with the National Oceanic And Atmospheric Administration's Fisheries unit to evaluate each fishery disaster request based primarily on data. Such determinations make these fisheries eligible for disaster assistance from NOAA. They may also qualify for disaster assistance from the Small Business Administration.

But solving the problem goes beyond loans and cleaning up the water quality. Ecosystems are rapidly changing as a result of climate change, according to the Peconic Estuary Partnership. Warmer ocean temperatures are more susceptible to the harmful effects of pollution, the excessive input of nutrients such as nitrogen and phosphorus in bodies of water, another concern for scientists and baymen.

The problem has played out across Long Island for decades. Locals recall the days when one could seemingly walk from boat to boat across the water packed with baymen that supplied half of the nation's shellfish until the 1980s brought brown tide, a pollutant-fed algae bloom that has suffocated much of the life and economy out of the bay. Septic tanks leaching into the groundwater is among the lead causes. Nowadays commercial fishermen are nearly relics and shellfish seeding initiatives strive to help clean the bay, as mollusks are natural filters, and recreate the quintessential long-lost Long Island job: Clam digger.

More recently, an intense and damaging brown tide has erupted across Great South Bay from Sayville to Patchogue. Monitoring by The Gobler Laboratory at Stony Brook University has revealed that a brown tide has rapidly intensified to more than 300,000 cells per milliliter in Patchogue Bay as of June 23.

"This is the most intense and widespread brown tide in four years," said Christopher Gobler, the endowed chair of Coastal Ecology and Conservation in the School of Marine and Atmospheric Sciences at SBU. "The timing of the current brown tide is particularly troubling for hard clam populations, as June marks the once per year event when they reproduce, and newly spawned hard clams are highly vulnerable to brown tides. The fate of these young-of-the-year clams may rest on the duration of the current brown tide which usually intensifies through June and into July until water temperatures get into the mid-70s."

Gobler noted that while brown tides originally occurred on both the South Shore and East End from 1985 through 1995, the Peconic Estuary has been free of this tide since 1995.

Smith, the CCE shellfish expert conducting state-funded scallop larva surveys in partnership with SBU, cautions that while the Peconic Bay scallop larva rebound is a positive sign, it may be too early to get hopes up.

"Our major concern now is if the adults survive to harvest now that they have spawned," he adds. "Last year they didn't. They died sometime between when they spawned in late June and September."

Only time will tell if steps toward revitalizing the local shell fishing industry will work.

Dr. Alisa Kauffman: Geriatric and House Call Dentistry Pioneer

BY OLIVER PETERSON

A practicing dentist since 1985, Dr. Alisa Kauffman is now a leading figure in geriatric dentistry and pioneer in running a house-call practice, treating patients at home in both NYC and the Hamptons. Dr. Kauffman is an in-demand lecturer worldwide, Director of Geriatric Dental Care at three nursing homes and founder of the Dental LIFE program at the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing.

How did you get to this point in your career?

After graduation I opened my own office on the Upper West Side on Central Park West where I treated a lot of retired teachers. Many of my patients or patients' families would call me asking if we were wheelchair compatible as they aged and could no longer come on their own. Unfortunately, the office was small and it was difficult to manage a wheelchair in the operatory, so I offered to see them at home. At first, I wasn't sure that this could work, but over the years I was able to figure it out. I bring extension cords and my own light, and I have adapted a suitcase and duffel bag to contain my complete office!

Doing dental work in patients' homes is a pretty innovative concept, and pretty unusual for the uninitiated. Did you come up with this idea?

I like to think I am the pioneer in this industry since I have been doing it for 35 years!

I am also at least one of the first to do it as a full-time career. When I was teaching at UPenn, they sent me to lecture to dental students in China and Korea. They were quite amazed and hopefully have adapted to this type of niche practice as well.

What makes geriatric dentistry unique? What is done differently with elderly patients?

I carefully chose my words when I chose GeriatricHouseCallDentistry.com. I do not want to treat patients who are able to go to a traditional brick-and-mortar office. My patients tend to be frailer, some are on many medications, have physical issues, and many have Alzheimer's disease or some form of dementia.

The most important skill one must have when treating an elderly or geriatric patient is patience. Going to homebound patients' homes makes them feel safe and comfortable. I can take my time and no ambulette is necessary for transportation. I can treat them wherever they would like — their bed, recliner or even in a chair with their head supported. Thank goodness I have a strong back.

Why have you focused on treating the elderly? It's a noble calling and possibly one not a lot of other dentists might choose.

The elderly are the most underserved population and the group with the most dental needs. Teeth are often neglected as you age. "They are just teeth," but teeth and the oral cavity are the gateway to our overall health. Poor oral health can lead to many dental issues, such as cavities, gum disease, infection and pain. Maintaining good oral care throughout your life can prevent cancer, diabetes, heart disease, Alzheimer's disease and dementia. I like to tell my patients to "only floss the teeth you want to keep!"

It's important as a quality-of-life issue to be able to smile (socialize) with teeth or with well-fitting dentures; and eating is the most essential activity in life, isn't it? We need our teeth to chew our food properly. No one likes eating puréed food if it can be avoided.

What are some challenges of treating those with dementia or Alzheimer's?

It definitely takes a special skill set as a dentist to treat the dementia patient. They often refuse to cooperate, but it's my job to get the procedure done. I can't share all my secrets. Read my book The Tooth and Nothing But the Truth! (therethandnothingbuttheruth.com). It's a complete guide to oral care for the elderly.

Are there services you can't perform in a patient's home?

The only dental procedures that cannot be done at home are root canals, crowns, bridges and removal of impacted teeth.

Do you have anything to add?

I am working on a new project, CaringAndAble.com, a website addressing everyday needs of the elderly. It contains a curated list of products, services and resources designed to help caregivers manage daily living. And there are webinars to watch, so you can click on the topics you need and listen to the CEO of the company giving you valuable information straight from the primary source. We are looking for new companies, services and products to join our list. I want to be the Angie's List for everything a caregiver needs.

I am also grateful for being honored as the chair of the CaringKind NYC Alzheimer's Walk on October 10 in Central Park. This is the charity closest to my heart. Alzheimer's disease will be cured in my lifetime!

Sag Harbor Artist Reynold Ruffins

Died Last Week at Age 91

"TUMBLERS" BY REYNOLD RUFFINS

BARBARA LASSEN

BY OLIVER PETERSON

Beloved Sag Harbor artist Reynold Ruffins died at age 91 on Sunday, July 11. He leaves behind a daughter, Lynn Ruffins Cave, three sons, Todd, Ben and Seth Ruffins, and six grandchildren, while his wife Joan predeceased him in 2013.

A well-respected and well-liked painter, illustrator and graphic designer, Ruffins co-founded Push Pin Studios, one of the nation's most prestigious art firms, with Milton Glaser, Edward Sorel and Seymour Chwast in 1954. Together, the artists created memorable logos and designs for blue-chip clients, such as IBM, AT&T, Coca-Cola, CBS, Pfizer, The New York Times, Scribners, Random House, Time Life, Fortune, Gourmet Magazine and the U.S. Post Office.

Ruffins also illustrated more than 20 children's books and collaborated with Whoopi Goldberg and jazz legend Herbie Hancock on a children's video, Koi and the Kola Nuts.

A graduate of NYC's prestigious Cooper Union, Ruffins earned numerous awards, including Cooper Union's Presidential Citation and the school's Augustus St. Gaudens Award for outstanding professional achievement in the arts. He was also honored with The New York Art Directors Club Award, The Society of Illustrators' Silver Medal and the Coretta Scott King Illustrator Award for his children's books, and he was a professor emeritus at Queens College, CUNY. He also taught at the School of Visual Arts and The Parsons-New School of Design, and was a visiting adjunct professor at Syracuse University.

As a fine artist, Ruffins moved away from the narrative illustration that brought him to prominence and instead focused on shape and color in expressionistic drawings and acrylic paintings. During his long career, the artist showed in internationally recognized group exhibitions in Milan, Bologna, Tokyo and the Louvre museum in Paris, France, along with numerous local exhibitions, bringing joy and wonder to the Sag Harbor and East End community.

Ruffins painted a Dan's Papers cover in 2016. Two years later, while discussing a 15-year retrospective of his work at Sag Harbor's John Jermain Memorial Library, the artist told us he enjoyed painting so much that he no longer had interest in creating representational work for other people.

"The kind of freedom that I have as a painter comes because I'm working only for myself," he explained, pointing out that he was no longer executing anyone else's vision. "It's only for the pleasure of design, color and line," Ruffins said. "I can do things so differently and so much more freely."

He will be missed.

Market Update:

The June 2021 Hamptons Real Estate Market Report

COURTESY HAMPTON MARKET DATA

THE PROPERTY AT 39 ADAMS LANE, SOUTHAMPTON WAS LISTED FOR $6.75M AND WENT UNDER CONTRACT JUST 12 DAYS AFTER COMING ON THE MARKET.

BY ADRIANNA NAVA

In June 2020, the COVID buying frenzy was well underway. Real estate industry professionals watched in amazement as properties that had been on the market for years with no interest began to see bidding wars. The number of new listings to hit the market, as well as the number of contracts signed, recorded figures many had never experienced in their careers.

June 2021 started out with a depleted inventory, but over the course of the month, listing supply increased 3.5% to 779 listings available for sale on July 1, 2021. In the first half of 2021, the number of contracts signed peaked in February and has been declining since, while staying relatively stable at an only 0.8% decline from May to June 2021. The number of new listings has been on an increasing trend since February and had its largest increase between January and February.

June 2021 saw a larger percentage of properties that were previously listed within the last year come back on the market than any other month of 2021 so far. Re-listed properties are included in the new listings stats, as long as they had been off the market for more than 30 days. For buyers who have been looking in the marketplace for a while, true new listings are fewer than the numbers make it seem.

Though the number of contracts signed held stable between May and June 2021, there was a 37% decrease for June year over year, from 197 to 124 contracts. The buying frenzy has ended, but the level of contract activity is still 210% above pre-COVID levels for this time of year.

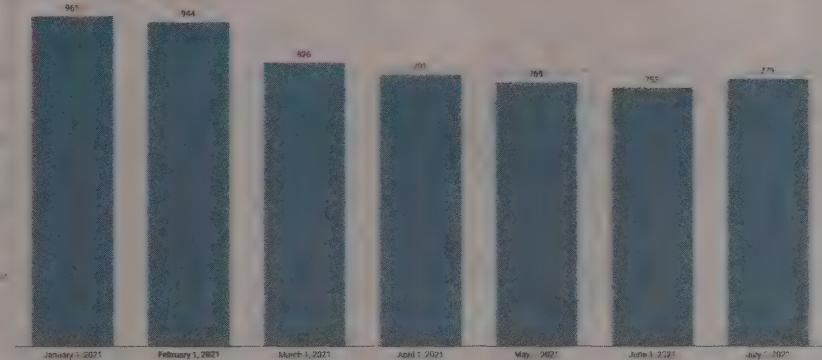

The number of sales declined from May to June by 21%, from 145 to 115 listings sold. There are still a lot of delayed closings, but they appear to be decreasing. In May 2021, 24% of sold listings took 90 days or more to get from signed contract to closing table. In June 2021, it was 19% and there were 13 less in June than in May.

When looking at the last four months, the monthly number of new listings versus contracts signed have moved toward an equilibrium. The results are reflected in the 15% absorption rate for June 2021 being almost identical to the 15.6% average monthly absorption rate for the first half of 2021.

In May 2021, the data showed that more logic and thoughtfulness had entered the marketplace and June 2021 confirms this to be the current trend. While activity has been stabilizing overall, this new market still does not indicate that pricing necessarily will.

The median sold price in the Hamptons increased 29% from May 2020 three months, as have new listings, but though new listings have finally caught up to the number of contracts signed in a month, in East Hampton 15 new listings came on the market while 21 contracts were signed. The continued depletion of inventory in this price point in East Hampton could likely spill into other areas as more inventory becomes available in those areas and buyers consider alternative options—like Southampton which had six listings sign contracts while nine came on the market.

Overall, absorption rates are higher than they were in the beginning of the year, but have been declining over the last 2-3 months, depending on the price point. The odds of selling have also declined overall. As more inventory has become available for sale, fewer contracts have been signed and fewer listings have closed than in recent months; however Amagansett has seen an increase in odds of selling to 110%, above its 105% average odds of selling for 2021 so far.

In the $10M-plus price point, seven listings sold, eight went into contract and 24 came on the market. In Water Mill, three contracts were signed while only two listings came on the market, whereas in East Hampton, three listings came on the market and none went into contract.

For more real estate news visit behindthehedges.com

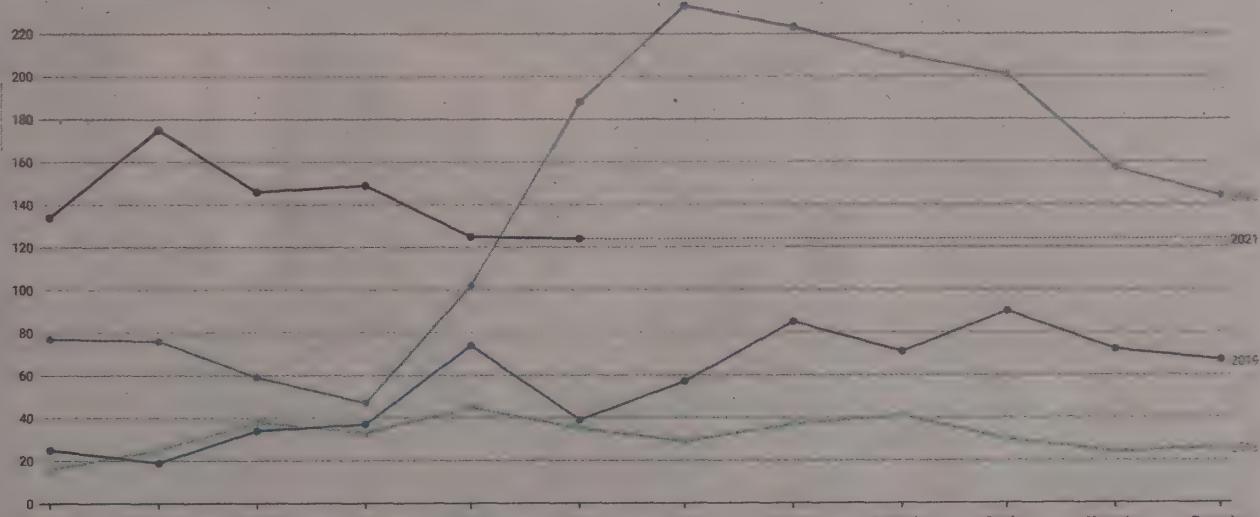

Amagansett had the highest absorption rate at 32%, while Water Mill had the lowest at 3%. Area and price point variations like these permeate the marketplace as the variety of buyers and sellers in the Hamptons adjust their way through 2021.

10 Pool Safety Tips

There's nothing better than a refreshing dip in the pool on a hot summer day, but that luxury can be a safety hazard. Here are precautions to take once the pool is open.

BUILD A FENCE

Fence gates should open outward, away from the pool area, and be self-closing and self-latching. In some places, they're required by law.

INSTALL AN ALARM

Consider buying an underwater swimming pool alarm system that uses motion sensors to detect wave activity and alert you when anyone jumps or falls into the pool.

NO DIVING

Diving boards can be dangerous. Swimming pool slides are also safety hazards to consider taking down.

KEEP A KIT

Make sure you have a life ring, rescue tube or life hook that you can use to pull someone from the water to safety. Also have a first aid kit on hand that's stocked with all the essentials.

INSPECT FOR HAZARDS

Kids (and adults) can trip on objects and fall into the water if these items are left near the edge of the pool. Make sure floats, tubes, toys and cleaning equipment are stored away from the water when they're not in use.

STORE CHEMICALS SAFELY

Pool chemicals help protect swimmers by killing disease-causing germs in the water, but they can also lead to injury when mixed improperly or not handled using protective gear, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

INSPECT DRAIN COVERS

Drain covers should be rounded covers, and there should be no cracks or missing screws.

LEARN CPR

A number of organizations such as the American Red Cross, fire departments and hospitals offer CPR certification courses.

SET THE RULES

Common rules include don't run on the pool deck, don't dive into shallow water, don't push anyone into the pool, don't swim without an adult present, don't dunk or hold anyone underwater.

TEACH KIDS SWIMMING

Private lessons are worth the investment if your kid has trouble learning how to swim.

BEHIND THE HEDGES REAL ESTATE

Kelly Klein Buys $16M North Haven Cottage

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

Kelly Klein, the photographer and ex-wife of the designer Calvin Klein, purchased a waterfront parcel on North Haven with a small fishing cottage on it, for $15.9 million.

The 1.69-acre property at 31 Cedar Avenue, once owned by former Vermont Governor Howard Dean's in-laws, Dr. Herman Steinberg and Dr. Ethel Bookhalter Steinberg, offers 250 feet of frontage on the Sag Harbor Bay with a deep water dock. The last ask was $16.5 million.

David Cox of Compass, the listing agent, declined to comment.

Klein, who has long lived in East Hampton, posted a photo on Instagram late last month showing she was enjoying her new waterfront retreat. "Love my new project! Bayside living! Can't wait to show you when I'm done! #livingonthedockofthebay"

"A true boater's paradise, this prime waterfront lot offers an unrivaled Hamptons lifestyle," the listing said. "Wake up to infinite vistas of open sky and shimmering water with nothing but untouched Mashomack Preserve in the distance. Step out onto the dock and enjoy everything that the North and South Forks have to offer, with the Shelter Island Sound as your playground."

The existing 600-square-foot, two-bedroom, one-bath cottage will surely be torn down soon to make way for the type of house the property commands.

There is a 10,000-square-foot building envelope and proposed plans in place for an eight-bedroom, two-story residence with a 1,000-square-foot accessory structure and a pool deck.

Neighbors heard Klein was the buyer and were not surprised by the purchase price, even though the house is a tear-down.

Nearby, 24 and 20 Forest Road sold, in separate transactions to the same buyer this spring for a combined $18 million. With a total of three acres and 500 feet of frontage, the new owner could build a 10,000-square-foot home based on renderings already completed by Blaze Makoid Architecture, according to Gary DePersia's previous listing at Corcoran.

A 3.11-acre waterfront estate at 60 Forest Road is listed for $18 million with Marilyn Clark and Ginger Thoerner of the ClarkThoerner team at Sotheby's International Realty. The existing five-bedroom home can be expanded and updated to create a 15,000-square-foot dream home with a 2,250-square-foot accessory structure and waterside pool, according to the listing.

Records show a limited liability company, with David Jannetti at the helm, according to tax records, purchased 31 Cedar Avenue, then a 1.1-acre parcel, in June of 2014 for $5.4 million. The seller was listed as the H. Steinberg Trust.

At the same time, the E. Steinberg Trust sold an adjacent vacant parcel at 29 Cedar Avenue to a separate limited liability company for $2.8 million.

Those two properties appear to have been combined into one and Jannetti built the dock and renovated the cottage, which was originally built in 1974.

Located on the south side of the Village of North Haven, the property is just minutes from the South Ferry and a short drive to Sag Harbor Village, making it one of the most coveted locations on the East End.

There is still an adjacent 0.4-acre lot for sale at 27 Cedar Avenue for $2.95 million. Jannetti also appears to own that property.

This Week's Cover Artist:

Jessica Brilli

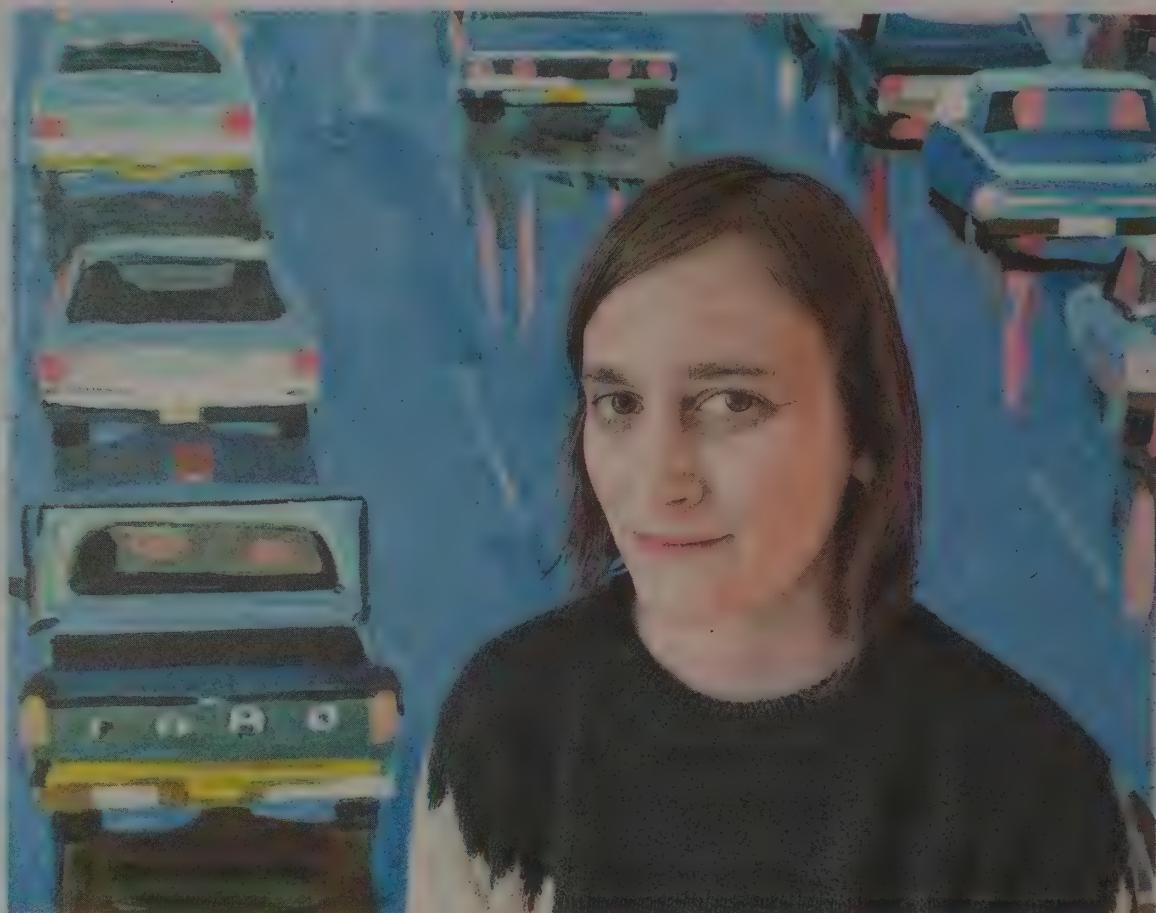

BY DAVID TAYLOR

Our July 23, 2021, cover artist is Jessica Brilli, whose most recent work draws inspiration from 35mm Kodachrome slides and vintage photographs collected from around the country. Her suburban scenes are a reflection of her early years on Long Island; however, through years of photographic research, she's come to realize that her experiences are a strand in a common thread shared by Americans of all backgrounds.

"Through my experience of painting and sharing these photos, I have found that there is something inherent in them that speaks to many Americans, whether it be a photo taken at a pool party in 1965 or of someone's mother standing in front of the family car—we insert our own lives into these scenes from the past," Brilli writes on her website. "I view thousands of slides and photos to find the ones that move me emotionally. I'm constantly on the hunt for photos that mirror scenes from my childhood, or that I feel a connection to through personal or familial experience."

Here, Brilli shares the story behind this week's cover art, "Swimming at Sea," her favorite spots on the East End and how the community can submit their photos to her ever-growing collection of nostalgic Americana.

Tell us about the inspiration and story of

JESSICA BRILLI

"Swimming at Sea."

"Swimming at Sea" was inspired by an old Kodachrome slide—the original image shows more of the scene, but I chose this specific cropping for the serenity it conveys. There's also something about floating in a pool of water on a ship in the ocean that brings me joy.

What makes this piece such an ideal fit for a summer Dan's Papers cover?

Everything about this piece says summer to me.

What are your favorite East End spots to visit in the summer, and do these locales appear in your work?

I've always loved visiting Greenport and have fond memories of having lunch with my family at the Rhumb Line restaurant when I was a kid. Orient Point is also nostalgic for me because I took many ferry trips from there when I was going to school in Rhode Island.

The summer after I graduated from college, I actually worked at Dan's Papers designing advertisements! (This was my first design job—my other career for the past two decades has been as the senior graphic designer at the Harvard Radcliffe Institute.) While at Dan's Papers, I really enjoyed spending time in the Hamptons with my friends and exploring the surrounding areas.

What do you find most rewarding about being an artist?

The joy that the paintings bring to people.

What works of yours can currently be seen at Ric Michel Fine Art and other East End galleries?

"Swimming at Sea" and "Night Vision."

Is there anything else you'd like to add?

Yes! I'm always on the lookout for color vintage slides and photos to use as inspiration for paintings, if anyone would like to share their collection with me, feel free to send images to jbrilli@gmail.com.

Milton Avery Works from Peter O'Toole Collection on View Ahead of Phillips Sale & Auction

"WHITE GULL RESTING" (OIL ON CANVAS BOARD), SIGNED AND DATED "MILTON AVERY 1963"

While finding breathtaking art in the Hamptons is as simple as walking down any given village Main Street, discovering rare works by the great masters of the 20th century happens almost exclusively at Phillips Southampton. On view through July 31, and soon to be available to buyers, is Milton Avery: A Sense of Place, featuring the works of one of the highly acclaimed American artists of the era.

"Milton Avery is one of the most celebrated American artists of the 20th century, whose relevance continues to the present day," says Robert Manley, deputy chairman and worldwide co-head of 20th century and contemporary art. "His appeal travels far beyond typical geographic constraints, a feat that is now underscored by the upcoming major retrospective of his work organized by the Royal Academy of Arts, London and curated by Edith Devaney."

Curated by Milton Avery's grandson Sean Cavanaugh and Waqas Wajahat, Milton Avery: A Sense of Place features approximately 50 works from the Milton Avery Trust and the private collection of Academy Award winner Peter O'Toole. The selection focuses on the various locales that served as inspiration for Avery's work, spanning three decades of the artist's lauded career. All works featured in the exhibition will either be offered through Phillips' private sales platform or at auction in Phillips' October Sales of 20th Century & Contemporary Art in London.

"Among those dedicated to his work was the celebrated actor Peter O'Toole," Manley says. "A household name across the globe for the past five decades, the celebrated actor was a devoted art collector for much of his lifetime and built a remarkable collection, with a particular affinity for Avery's works."

O'Toole acquired all three of his Avery works from London's Waddington Galleries between 1963 and 1964, just after his starring role in the 1962 film Lawrence of Arabia, which earned 10 Academy Award nominations and seven wins. These works—"Bird by Wild Sea," "White Gull Resting" and "Gulls in Fog"—each portray the shoreline, a common theme in Avery's work, and have remained in the loving care of O'Toole's family for five decades.

Milton Avery: A Sense of Place offers a rare look at the artist's work from the 1930s through the 1960s, from his distinguished career in New York City portraiture to his landscapes of Provincetown, where he worked alongside abstract artists Adolph Gottlieb and Mark Rothko. They, as well as Barnett Newman, credit Avery as an influence in their artistic development, and his breakthroughs in color and form balance changed the way emerging Abstract Expressionists approached their work.

Avery's unwavering legacy is a testament to his ability to conjure both a sense of place and atmosphere, while keeping his compositions pared down and colorful. Though he only visited Europe once in his life, his style more closely matches that of European Experimentalism than the American Impressionism and landscape traditions of the time. Perusing through his unique landscapes and seascapes in this exhibition, it's clear that he found inspiration wherever he traveled, with works hailing from Upstate New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Gaspe Peninsula in Canada and Cape Cod.

"For this exhibition, we are honored to have the opportunity to work with the Milton Avery Trust, the family of Peter O'Toole, Waqas Wajahat and several other international private collections in bringing these rare-to-market works to the public," Manley adds.

Phillips Southampton is located at 1 Hampton Road, Southampton. To learn more about the October auction and private sales, call 212-848-1750 or visit phillips.com.

Play Review: The Gateway's 'Songs for a New World'

JEFF BELLANTE

MORGAN BILLINGS SMITH, CALEB MITCHELL, ALYSSA WRAY, MARY KATE MOORE, CHRISTIAN DOUGLAS, JORDAN GOODSELL

BY GENEVIEVE HORSBURGH

It's been 16 long months, but the stage at the barn in Bellport known as The Gateway Playhouse has finally been reawakened. The organization may not have been able to put on shows over the duration, but they kept busy with virtual learning and theater programs, a successful run with a drive-in series that boasted over 100 movie titles, and they even hosted a drive-thru Haunted House at Southaven Park in Brookhaven.

Always a pioneer in musical theater, The Gateway's official start to their 2021 season is a new adaptation of Songs for a New World, a synthesis of the show's many iterations since its inception in 1995 with original music and lyrics by Jason Robert Brown. With this production, The Gateway is immediately tackling the issue at hand, COVID-19, and flashes of how it is, how it was and how single choices, brief moments in life, can affect the course of the future.

Songs for a New World is not a musical, nor does it have a plot. It is a production based on a theme told through the power of music—the power of songs and lyrics when everything is stripped of glamour and bright lights and the truth is laid bare, whether ugly or beautiful. In the first act, we are faced with COVID-19 patients struggling to breathe and dying next to nurses covered from head to toe with pictures of themselves on their uniforms so the patient can kind of see who is with them. The loneliness of nurse and patient is raw, and comes alive through the lyrics. We've all lived through this pandemic in our own unique way, and the cast brings all of it together on stage—the emotion reverberates through the audience, causing hairs on necks to stand at attention as this truly profound experience unfolds before us. The culmination of months of fear, doubt, indecision, hope, death—the whole gamut of pandemic life is displayed in all its glory and, yes, all of it is ugly. It's a reminder of all we have lived through individually and opens our eyes to the experiences of others—a theater experience not based on whimsy, but of human nature and the reminder of our ability to rise above all things.

The six-person cast is made up of truly powerful singers who play numerous roles throughout the production—a seamless ebb and flow of who is who revealed in the lyrics, so pay attention. Most notable in the cast is Alyssa Wray, fresh off the top 10 of the most recent season of American Idol. Her solid set of pipes are a crowd pleaser, and she can belt out a note to the moon, earning some hoots from the audience for her fantastic presence and voice. In her bio in the playbill, she shares a quote that resonates, "When words fail, music speaks," and that seems fitting for this production and in this new world we all find ourselves living in. With the entire show presented through song and lyrics, it must be a challenge for these performers to maintain their voices throughout, but Wray's voice never wavered unintentionally. The raw emotion of "I'm not Afraid of Anything" might have audience members holding back tears.

In the jarring moment we realize a pampered housewife is threatening to jump off a ledge in "Just One Step," performed by the tiny powerhouse Morgan Billings Smith, we are brought back to the theme of the show: The moments in time that define us. Next, the sweetly melodic voice of Mary Kate Moore tells a story of lost love and the choice that altered her fate.

The surprise of the night came in the form of Caleb Mitchell, a senior at Middle Tennessee State University, whose voice captivated and inspired. Sometimes low-pitched and other moments reaching a high falsetto, the emotion he was able to convey in his songs was nothing short of magical. The talented singer blew the audience's collective mind in the number "Flying Home," a sad, strong and inspiring song that tells a bittersweet story and, again, how one choice, one moment in time, can set the course of one man's future.

Rounding out the cast were Christian Douglas and Jordan Goodsell. In the second act Douglas plays a gay man in the late '70s/early '80s when the global AIDS pandemic was all people were talking about. The parallels between that pandemic and the current one are not lost on us and really make you think again about what we have all lived through and what we are still living through as we navigate through our lives.

Having missed live theater in the past year, it was refreshing to be back and in the audience, holding a freshly printed playbill, enjoying a show not built on a specific storyline or tap dancing. It was an ode to human perseverance—to the spirit inside us all that gives us the strength to make those life-defining choices, whatever they may be. We will still be here, we will still fight, and we will continue to live each moment and be thankful we are back here, watching an amazing cast of performers sing their hearts out. Songs for a New World is the necessary transition we all need and a choice you'll not regret. Catch it playing now through July 31 at The Gateway Playhouse.

Although the 2021 season got off to a later than usual start, there are many exciting performances to look forward to from the talented staff at The Gateway, from the lighting crew to the ushers, the box office staff to The Gateway producer Paul Allan himself, everyone is thrilled to be back in action. Million Dollar Quartet will play at The Gateway Playhouse August 4–21. The Gateway production of hit Broadway show Newsies can be seen at the Patchogue Theatre August 25–September 11, followed by A Gentleman's Guide to Love and Murder November 17–December 4. Their Holiday Spectacular on Ice is back December 17–January 1, 2022.

75th Guild Hall Clothesline Art Sale: The Tradition Returns July 24

BY ANGELA LAGRECA

It's a historic event, modernized for touchless shopping and a great way to purchase art, support Guild Hall and our local artists.

It's the 75th annual Clothesline Art Sale—where eager art lovers line up at 9 a.m. outside Guild Hall for the chance to browse and buy works of art, hung on beach dunes fencing on the front lawn.

Over the years, the Clothesline sale (which started in 1946) has included some of the area's most famous artists. Abstract expressionists such as Willem de Kooning, Elaine de Kooning, Jackson Pollock and Alfonso Ossorio all participated back in the 1950s.

This year, Clothesline features 240 artists and 675 works of art ranging in price "from $100 all the way up to $4-5,000, with the main prices anywhere from $500-$1,200," says Casey Dalene, Guild Hall's Lewis B. Cullman Associate Curator for Learning and Public Engagement.

"We push the artists to price their artwork really well so that the art is acceptable to the community that shows up to shop it," says Dalene. "We always get a lot of the local community ... It's a very neat sort of tradition within the community ... not just the seasonal community—but the year-round community as well, and a way for them to get real paintings, real art for their walls, at an affordable price."

The sale was modified last year due to COVID and those changes remain for this year. Normally the show is inside the gallery and out front of the building; this year it will again be only outside (while maintaining the main gallery exhibition, Alexis Rockman's Shipwrecked, "so people can come for the sale and check out the current exhibition as well"). Guild Hall has increased the front lawn and "doubled the space" they use to dis-

It's a one day thing ... that feeling of discovery ... to experience that lucky, clandestine moment.

- play the art on the fencing along the grass.

Where in the past a purchaser would pick up a piece of art off the fence or wall inside and take it to the cashier and wait in line to pay for it and receive a handwritten receipt, now there is an online sales platform for Clothesline shoppers:

"You see a painting, you like it, you see the price on the painting but you can also see it on the website—there's a QR code that you can scan and you go right to the painting on our website and go right to your shopping cart and check out, right there and take the painting with you," says Dalene. (If you shop the website from home, once you have made the purchase, you then make an appointment through the website to pick up the piece at Guild Hall the week after Clothesline.)

The Clothesline sale opens at 9 a.m. in-person and online, but you can shop from home all day until midnight. Each artist submits up to three pieces of work (for a $15 fee) and Guild Hall does a 50/50 split with the sale of a painting: 50% goes to the artist and 50% goes to Guild Hall.

If last year is any indication, the 75th year celebration will be well attended.

"(Last year) it was a huge success, we overshot our budget ... the community really came out for Guild Hall and the artists and just shopped—so we are hoping for the same this year ... And obviously people are more out and about and more comfortable about being out and about," says Dalene.

At its heart, the Clothesline sale is a benefit for Guild Hall. And it supports the artists of the area.

"For the artists to also get exposure and sell their work—we love when we can help artists. It's another opportunity to do that, it's part of our program," says Dalene.

And for the art lovers and shoppers?

"It's a one-day thing ... that feeling of discovery ... to experience that lucky, clandestine moment."

The 75th annual Guild Hall Clothesline Art Sale is Saturday, July 24, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. at Guild Hall and online from 9 a.m. until midnight. Guild Hall is located at 158 Main Street, East Hampton. Visit and shop at shopart.guildhall.org. For more information, visit guildhall.org.

STEVEN MAGLIO

BY DAVID TAYLOR

With 2020 being what it was, many of us likely can't remember the last time we got to experience a classic performing arts festival—being captivated by singers, dancers and performers as they wow the crowd with impressive feats of artistic, and often athletic, skill. The can't-miss Westhampton Beach Project is here to make up for lost time.

"After a devastating year for the arts community, I knew that it was time to launch the Westhampton Beach Project event, which has been brewing in mind for the last few years," states Steven Colucci, president of Musical Mime Theater and founder of the Westhampton Beach Project.

"It was very hard to make the decision to go ahead with this and take over a year of planning to do it," he says, adding that it was WHB Mayor Maria Moore who ultimately convinced him to plan it, but with every precaution in mind, of course. "The pandemic is basically working for us not against us now. We're going to go ahead and do it, we'll do social distancing, but everybody's ready—ready to go out, ready for action."

The Westhampton Beach Project

Westhampton Beach Project: The Performing Arts Festival You've Been Waiting For

hits the Great Lawn on the village's Main Street on July 30 and 31, beginning each night at 8 p.m. The two-day festival kicks off on Friday with a musical tribute to Frank Sinatra by highly acclaimed vocalist Steven Maglio and his 11-piece Maglio Orchestra. This act has likely graced the stage at The Carnegie Club more times than any other night club act in New York City, and Maglio himself has shared the spotlight with greats like Frankie Valli, Smokey Robinson and Jordin Sparks. The night concludes with West African and French American singer-songwriter Eva Sita, who will serenade the audience with a set list featuring songs in three different languages. Rumor has it she may even join Maglio for a few Sinatra duets.

Day two features a selection of show-stopping routines by soloist dancers from the American Ballet Theater, including Jonatan Luján, Michael de la Nuez, Jose Sebastian, Javier Rivet, Isadora Loyola and Luciana Paris, who aided Colucci in curating this event. Next up, is choreography by the Alison Cook Beatty Dance Company, an NYC-based nonprofit modern dance company. Featured dancers include Vera Paganin, Miranda Stuck, Aurélie Garcia, Mariah Anton, Asia Bonilla, Jaryd Farcon, Charles Scheland and Austin Kelly. And don't miss an extra special performance by Aaron Smyth of America's Got Talent fame.

While free to attend, reserved 6 p.m. VIP seating is available for $25, and VIP tickets that grant access to the cocktails and hors d'oeuvres tent are $50. Proceeds benefit the Musical Mime Company, which was founded to assemble artists in all areas of creativity and foster young, creative people throughout the world. "M&T Bank and the Lanza Family Foundation have been great supporters to this charity," he adds.

Having gotten his start in Westhampton Beach, being among the first to transform the Hampton Arts Cinema into a concert hall before traveling the United States and Europe as a professional dancer and mime, Colucci always knew he wanted to return to Westhampton Beach for his magnum opus.

"I said the final stomping ground of Steven Colucci would be Westhampton," he shares. "Westhampton has a lot for me here and offers a lot—brings great art and culture to the United States and (gives a platform to) young talented writers, dancers, musicians, artists, lecturers, historians..."

Having arranged, self-funded and promoted numerous events over the years, including the wildly successful Mid Hudson Festival at Bard College, Colucci has now gained substantial financial backing and is ready to bring the Mid Hudson concept to the next level. "That's going to happen in Westhampton bigger and better, because I'm 69 years old now, and I'm going to blow it away—I know how to do it better and stronger than I ever did," Colucci says. "I totally sponsored everything financially—Steven Colucci sponsored everything for 40 years. This is the first time I've ever had money donated from other sources, so now that I have funding, this is going to be up and better than anything ever."

Sharing words of wisdom

Words are powerful things and I was moved by them at a dear friend's funeral, then at the opening of the Southampton African American Museum, and then reading from special books.

Last week, old friend John "Senior" Koufakis, a true Horatio Alger success story, left us at 94. His brilliant son Michael shared his father's lifelong guide to success at his funeral. They are worth repeating:

- Live within your means
- Do your best
- Hard work pays off
- Keep your word
- Don't steal
- Don't waste money
- Be selfless
- Fight for what you believe in
- Have fun
- Reach for the stars
- Have faith and miracles can happen

His life lessons are a roadmap for all our lives!

I was delighted to meet Natalie S. Walker at the opening of the Southampton Africa American Museum. I was very moved as she recited her powerful poem, which you can read below.

Natalie Walker

As a Woman I have the Power

*As a woman I have the power
The power to feel compassion for those who would never acknowledge my plea
The power to grieve & pray for.
even the ones who wish to destroy me*

*The power of an unending affection for my race and distinctively for my family
The power of a pure love that can build our people's unity*

*The power that can endure and surpass all you can conceive
The power to deny restraints that I won't let keep me from what I'm meant to be*

*The power that can rise to overcome any type of adversity
The power with the knack to make real what was once just a fantasy*

*As a Woman I have the Power
The power of an acute intuition that can anticipate a mysterious sentiment
The power of a keen insight that can transpose your true intent*

*I have the power to exhibit a profound poise that pushes away any insecurity
The power that makes you overlook my surface allure and makes you focus on my inner most beauty*

*I have the God given power to handle all the enemy can contrive
The power to devise a plan that will continue to elevate my stride*

*The power to be a vehicle for the unborn and to be the proverbs 31 virtuous wife because I have the power to reach towards God's full purpose for my life
As a Woman, I have the Power*

SUMMER READING

Summer has always been a time to catch up on my reading. Even though my work keeps me busy, I cherish my "play" time, which is reading by the ocean.

Here are some books I want to share with you.

A new person in my life, Bernard Bushell, a retired public relations man but also a philosopher, shared his book, "The Formula: How I Found It and What It Can Do For You." He hopes it influences people to "lower our soaring divorce rate and remedy the damage it causes to relationships, families and children."

Bernie includes some of his favorite sayings that I love and find to be marvels of truth. Here are a few wise words:

Albert Einstein: "The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results."

Werner Erhard: "Do not dwell on the past — live in the moment of now."

Joseph Campbell: "Follow your bliss."

Many other words of wisdom follow. You can give the book a read to learn more!

Later in the week, I ventured to Southold to meet the builder, entrepreneur and philanthropist Jonathan Tibett.

I had the pleasure of meeting him at the Taste of the North Fork dinner in Riverhead. He is the proud owner of one of the East End's greatest restaurants: North Fork Table & Inn, a farm-to-table restaurant and inn with Michelin-starred Chef John Fraser as his partner.

As a Westhampton resident and cheerleader of the spectacularly changing Riverhead, I was delighted when Jon said he would give me a tour of Southold, the town he cherishes and is working hard to develop.

Remarkably, his best friend Joseph Petrocelli is devoting himself to Riverhead's development, just as Jon Tibett is to Southold.

We began at his latest development The Shoals, a stunning hotel, convention center and marina that is set on the shore overlooking the harbor. It is close to completion.

I loved walking on the thick, lush

Jon Tibett with his son Krystian in front of one of the many pieces of art found all over his properties.

cious grass lawn outside the reception center. John shared with me that he "loves kicking off (his) shoes at the end of a day and walking in the grass. I want my clients to feel that this getaway is created for that feeling."

It's an impressive, well-thought out destination! I hope to visit when it opens in August.

From there, we drove to his Southold General store, which boasts an outdoor dining square featuring a bust of Albert Einstein in the center. One may wonder why, but Jon is a student of history and respects it.

He bought the property that had, for decades, been the Rothman Department Store. The proprietor David Rothman had remarkably developed a friendship with Albert Einstein in 1939 when the great man spent a summer in Southold.

Einstein came into the store looking for a pair of sandals. But the only sandals left were a pair of women's size 11. He bought them anyway! He struck up a conversation with David, marking the beginning of an intimate friendship.

When I visited, sitting in the square was David Rothman's grandson Ron, who I asked to pose with Jon — just like his grandfather in the portrait that had been commissioned by Jon. Ron gave me a copy of the book he wrote, "My Grandfather and Albert Einstein."

Ironically my beloved friend Dan Rattiner also wrote about that famous summer in his book "Albert Einstein's Summer Vacation." It is a wonderful short story about this unique time in Southold's history and the untold story of the two great men meeting and bonding.

Both books are great reads.

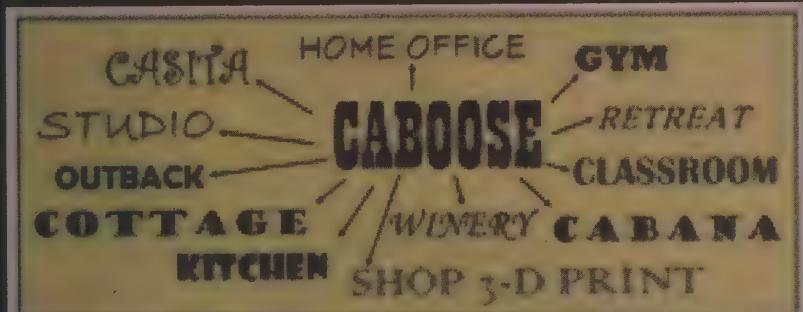

If you want to become more successful, read Leesa Rowland's "The Charisma Factor: Unlock the Secrets of Magnetic Charm and Personal Influence in Your Life." It's chock-full of ideas that "unlock the secrets of magnetic charm and its influence in your life."

To learn her secrets, take time to read her insightful book!

Eric Fischl's Saints of Sag Harbor: Part IX

The religious past and the art-as-religion future have intersected within the walls of the Sag Harbor Church, a cultural hub with famed artists/activists April Gornik and Eric Fischl as the founders, and Sara Cochran as executive director.

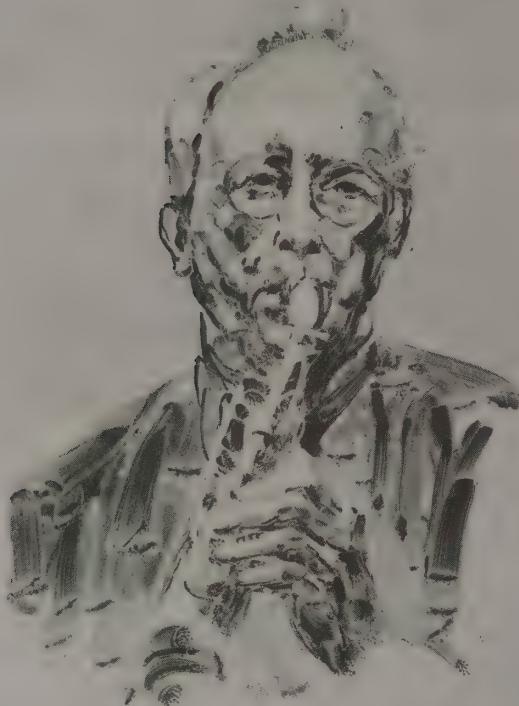

The soaring building is home to 20 windows; it is there, explained Fischl, where the "arts saints of Sag Harbor, the dead saints, will be canonized." Fischl's artistic contribution to the historical narrative of those who were drawn to the East End as a vortex of creativity shine down from the portals surrounding the space.

For more information about programs, visit sagharborchurch.org.

Dan's Papers is showcasing two windows a week for 10 weeks, with Fischl's lighthearted responses when asked the irreverent question, "What would this luminary be the patron saint of, besides Sag Harbor?"

HAL MCKUSICK BY ERIC FISCHL

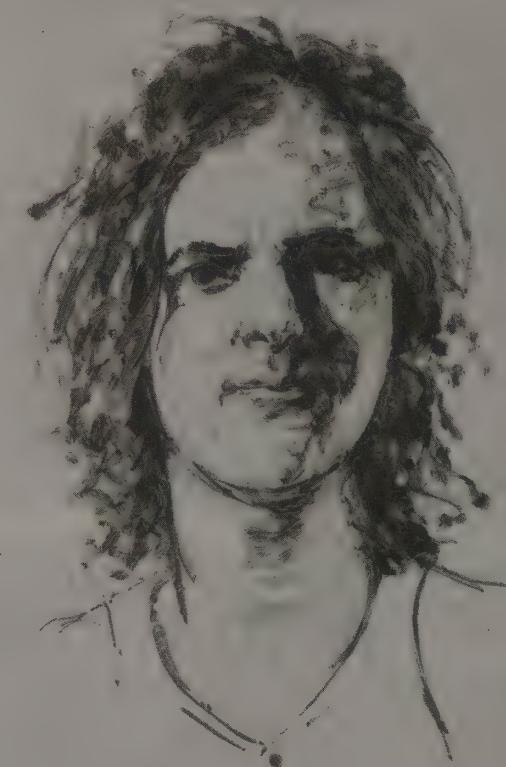

Hal McKusick (1924–2012)

Fischl: "Hal McKusick is the saint for those who wield a hammer and a horn. Blow by blow, tap by tap, his precise edges and sharp shapes brought his talent into our world with all the smoothness of his alto sax and the clean lines of his Shaker-inspired tables and chairs."

Hal McKusick was an American jazz alto saxophonist, clarinetist and flutist. He worked in the big bands of Les Brown, Woody Herman (1943), Boyd Raeburn (1944–45), Alvino Rey (1946), Buddy Rich, Claude Thornhill (1948–49), Terry Gibbs, Elliot Lawrence and many others. McKusick also released albums under his own leadership, including a 1957 album for Prestige titled Triple Exposure.

In 1958, McKusick led a small group with Bill Evans that recorded Cross Section—Saxes, which included contributions from Art Farmer, Paul Chambers, Connie Kay and Barry Galbraith. For this album, McKusick commissioned arrangements from George Handy, Jimmy Giuffre, George Russell and Ernie Wilkins. He also worked on sessions with other prominent jazz musicians such as Lee Konitz and John Coltrane.

McKusick worked with nearly all the famous musicians in the genre, including Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie. He settled in Sag Harbor in 1972, where he taught at the Ross School in East Hampton. In addition to being a jazz great, he was also an impeccable woodworker, and worked in his studio at the Prime House, one of the great old historic houses of Sag Harbor dating from 1795. It was lovingly preserved and maintained thanks to his extraordinary care and talent.

GORDON MATTA-CLARK BY ERIC FISCHL

Gordon Roberto Echaurren Matta-Clark (1943–1978)

"Gordon Matta-Clark is the saint for anarchists who would find shelter in deconstructed abodes and nourishment in exotic ingredients that flavor the irrational while inspiring our craving for a new taste," Fischl says.

Gordon Matta-Clark was an American artist best known for the site-specific artwork he made in the 1970s.

Matta-Clark's parents were artists Anne Clark and Roberto Matta, the Chilean Surrealist painter. His twin brother Sebastian, also an artist, sadly committed suicide in 1976.

In 1969, curator Willoughby Sharp introduced him to members of the New York art world. Matta-Clark's work, "Museum," was shown at Klaus Kertess' notorious Bykert Gallery.

Matta-Clark, Carol Goodden and Tina Girouard cofounded FOOD, a restaurant in SoHo, New York in 1971, which was managed and staffed by artists. FOOD hosted the Philip Glass Ensemble, Mabou Mines and the dancers of Grand Union, among others. It was in the context of this artistic community that Matta-Clark developed the idea of "anarchitecture," a conflation of the words anarchy and architecture, to suggest an interest in voids, gaps and leftover spaces.

The artist tragically died of pancreatic cancer at the age of 35 on August 27, 1978 in NYC.

Whack-a-Thug:

How to Deal with Strangers Who Try to Come Through Your Entry Gate

BY DAN RATTINER

If you are looking for a new start-up to invest in, look no further than James Wilson's Whack-a-Thug, which already is all the rage at the entrance to gated homes in St. Tropez, Palm Beach and Palm Springs. As Wilson has just bought an oceanfront mansion in Southampton, I thought it appropriate to interview him there. We talked in his library.

"What exactly is Whack-a-Thug?" I asked.

"When you are invited to a gated home," he said, "you turn into the driveway and stop your car facing the gate, roll down your window and enter in a code to get the gate to open."

"Of course," I said, "I did that here."

"The idea, of course, is to keep control of who is allowed to enter your property. The truth, though, is if some unwanted person were to try punching in random combinations long enough, they might come upon the code and let themselves in."

"I suppose that could happen."

"It happens a lot. More than you might think. And that is what has made Whack-a-Thug such a success. Whack-a-Thug adds an extra level of security. Did you notice a metal box just next to where you punch in the code?"

"I did. It seemed to be some sort of add-on."

"That's Whack-a-Thug. There's a metal door on it where it faces the side of your car. If you try the code and get it wrong three times in a row, the door opens and a boxing glove on a stick pops out and punches you right in the nose. You go away."

"How does it know how to aim the punch?"

"We know right where the perp is. He's got the driver's side window down, his arm sticks out and so does his head, so he can read the small numbers on the keypad. Laser beams locate the nose."

"I guess I got lucky."

"How is that?"

"Just now entering the code I got it wrong the first two times, but only got it the third time."

"I told you the code on the phone when you were leaving your house."

"I wrote it down wrong. I thought the fourth number was a 7. When I tried it two times I realized it might be a 9. And it was."

"Well, we have two models, one fancier than the other. One is called 'Whack-a-Thug Regular,' which is what I have here. The other is 'Whack-a-Thug Deluxe.'"

"How much do each of them cost?"

"If you have to ask, you can't afford it. Whack-a-Thug is not cheap."

"Oh."

"Whack-a-Thug Deluxe has three settings. You get a remote, which you keep with you to change the settings from as far away as 200 yards. The settings are, in addition to 'boxing glove,' 'delay' and 'disable.'

"The boxing glove setting you know.

The delay setting causes the device to fire sticky green sludge across your windshield after the third miss. You won't be going anywhere until you scrape it off. It's harmless and can easily be removed with an ice scraper. Anyway, the perp thinks he's also being seen on a video monitor, and since he has to get out of the car to scrape, he won't be back."

"Sounds effective."

"It is. Disable is even more effective. If you get the code wrong three times with the disable setting on, a box pops open 1 foot off the ground and a small steel dagger pops out and punches a hole in your left front car tire, retracts, and you're stuck with a flat tire. It also automatically calls the police."

"Amazing."

"When bad people learn you have Whack-a-Thug, you won't ever be bothered again. That's our pledge."

We talked some more, and he told me he is talking about installing a variation of Whack-a-Thug with the mayors of the Hamptons, who are reportedly planning some sort of pay parking in all the parking spaces in Southampton and East Hampton. It would activate if you don't pay.

"It would have to be modified," Wilson told me. "But we could do it."

And with that, I thanked him for the interview and started to leave.

"When you approach the gate," he told me, "there's a special radio signal that automatically opens the gate to let you out, just like anywhere else. But be quick. If you don't leave within 8 seconds, a grappling net is fired from a cannon in the top of a nearby tree. It wraps itself around your car and lifts it up a few feet. If that happens, just give me a call from your cell phone."

Okay, I said. And so I left, scooting through the open gate briskly with no problem.

Whack-a-Thug adds an extra level of security.

Our Amazing History: Jackie Bouvier Kennedy, First Lady

BY DAN RATTINER

Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy became one of the youngest first ladies when, at age 31, her husband John F. Kennedy, was elected president of the United States. Only two other first ladies were younger than she when their husbands became president, and two who were from the Hamptons. One of those was Julia Gardiner, born in East Hampton more than a century before Jacqueline Lee Bouvier was born in Southampton. Two out of three ain't bad.

Bouvier was the daughter of a Manhattan stockbroker named John "Black Jack" Bouvier III who summered with his wife and two children in a 10-bedroom mansion called Lasata at 121 Further Lane in East Hampton. Bouvier's mother was socialite Janet Norton Lee.

Jackie rode horses and by the age of 11 was celebrated as an excellent rider, winning national medals at jumping events in the Hamptons. When she was 10, her mother and father were divorced, something not often done in those years. Her mother moved to McLean, VA and soon married an heir to the Standard Oil fortune. Jackie attended Miss Porter's School in Farmington, CT, spent a short time at Vassar, then George Washington University. After graduation with a bachelor of arts in French, she got a job as a photographer with the Washington Times Herald. There, at a political dinner, she met Jack Kennedy, the soon-to-be elected senator from Massachusetts, who said, "I've never met anyone like her," to his friends. Sixteen months later, they were married in Newport, RI, in what was described at the time as the wedding of the year.

In 1960, Jack Kennedy, at the age of 43, was elected president of the United States. Jackie was beautiful, fashionable and eager to redecorate the White House. She also set new fashion standards, which became celebrated around the country.

In 1963, she was in the back seat of an open car with her husband touring Dallas, Texas when a man with a rifle shot Jack from a nearby building. He died in her arms. At the time of his death, their children were Caroline, nearly age 6, and "John-John," John F. Kennedy Jr., nearly 3.

Jackie mourned her husband for several years, then married a Greek shipping magnate named Aristotle Onassis who was nearly twice her age. She lived with him in the lap of luxury for seven years before he too passed on. Then she returned to New York City to work as a book editor for the remainder of her working life.

Jackie in New York was heavily involved in preservation and history. She often was seen jogging in Central Park.

MARK SHAW/AP/SHUTTERSTOCK

She died at age 64 and the city named the Central Park reservoir after her.

Before her death in 1994, she bought a summer compound on Sagaponack Road. In her later years, she helped her elderly Aunt Edie and her daughter Little Edie, age 50, members of the Bouvier family now adrift without money or prospects because Aunt Edie's husband left them earlier and Big Edie never got over it. They were discovered living in squalor in a broken-down mansion called Grey Gardens in the Georgica section of East Hampton.

Coche Comedor's Chef, Center Moriches Dining & More

BY HARRY POWERS

Chef Highlight: Juan Juarez, Coche Comedor

A Mexican native, Coche Comedor Chef de Cuisine Juan Juarez learned his love for cooking from his mother growing up in a little town called Puebla. In 1986, Juarez immigrated to the United States to join his father who was working as a prep cook in Manhattan. His first job in the kitchen was at Saloon on 64th and Broadway. He began as a dishwasher and worked his way up to line cook in his nine years at the restaurant. Juarez left Saloon with the chef Jorge Adriasola and landed at Patria Cuba restaurant on Park Avenue working alongside him. After three years, chef Adriasola recommended Juarez to Nick & Toni's head chef at the time Hillary Borget. He started work at Nick & Toni's in 1998 as Hillary's sous chef. Upon Hillary's departure, Juarez was promoted to chef de cuisine. For over 10 years Juarez ran the kitchen at Nick & Toni's alongside the corporate executive chef Joseph Realmuto, planning and executing an inventive and fresh Mediterranean menu with a strong emphasis on locally sourced produce, meats and diary. In 2019, Juarez relocated to the Hamptons to be a part of the culinary team creating the restaurant group's newest venture, Coche Comedor. Juarez's Mexican heritage has been invaluable in the creation of the menu, design and vibe at Coche Comedor.

Discover the charm of Center Moriches:

Set in a retro cottage, the Country Cottage Diner doesn't disappoint when it comes to delivering a homey atmosphere and great-tasting food. The friendly staff isn't the only thing that keeps people coming back. Menu highlights include crab Benedict, grilled chicken fajitas and creamy malted shakes; it's the perfect stop if you're craving comfort food.

Who doesn't love a good dinner and show? At Mikado you get both with their hibachi dinner feature. Enjoy a fiery show, all while watching your food being prepared right in front of you. Their extensive menu also includes sushi and sashimi, kitchen appetizers and entrees, salads and soups. If you're looking for a deal, join them for lunch, specials are served until 3 p.m.

La Volpe Ristorante offers a taste of Italy, with wood-burning brick oven pizzas and focaccia, homemade soups and pasta. Best of all, the restaurant just kicked off their Foxy Afternoons where customers can enjoy all drinks for under $10 from Tuesday through Sunday from 2–5 p.m. Hosting a party? Make sure to check out their luncheon and party packages that include a first and second course, dessert and complimentary drinks.

While you may quite literally have to walk into the mouth of the shark when entering Atlantic Seafood, there's nothing but good eats promised. The

4. Spoon into glass top with sliced avocado.

New Alpina Restaurant Brings Alpine Dining to the North Fork

BY FINN HARTNETT

Greenport's newest restaurant is offering a brand of food the town, and maybe all of Long Island, has never seen before. Alpina, which opened to the public on July 17, is a Swiss-Italian restaurant which features, among other things, pastas, schnitzels and wine.

The idea of a New York eatery that focuses on Alpine cuisine came from Christoph Mueller, the owner of the Green Hill Hospitality Group and a native of Switzerland. As Alpina's website states, most of the restaurant's flavors come from Ticino, a southern province of Switzerland where Italian is the main language and food is prepared in an Italian style. Switzerland, though, is a country without one distinct ethnic group, and Alpina draws inspiration from Austria and France in addition to Italy and the Alps to complete their menu. They also source many of their ingredients direct from the North Fork. "We're trying to pull all of these crazy ingredients from where we can (on the North Fork), and then, when we need ingredients for our meats and cheeses, we source from Italy and Switzerland," says executive chef George Musho.

Alpina's menu is ambitious, featuring dishes like quail and clam orecchiette, but the chefs know that they have to be mindful and consider the difficulty.

of sourcing and preparing these dishes. A lot of ingredients have to be made in-house, including gelato, pasta and butter.

With so many cultures making up Alpina's menu, one could imagine that the restaurant might sometimes face a conflict between the different styles of cooking. French flavors overpowering German ones to create an unwanted fusion meal, perhaps. But Musho says the different kinds of cooking more often than not just mean choosing between a few key ingredients. He cited veal schnitzel as an example of this. "In Italy, you have veal milanese, and in Switzerland, you have schnitzel, and then in Austria, you also have schnitzel. The cooking processes are all very similar ... but because of the regionality, you use different ingredients." (Alpina, for the record, goes for a simple kind of schnitzel, using a butterflied, bone-in veal cut that they serve with lemon and pine salt.)

Another draw for Alpina is its wine bar, which is prominently featured on their website and social media accounts. For good reason, too: As the director of Green Hill Hospitality Group, Brendan Spiro says in an email, Alpina has collected "Italian Alpine region wines, most of which have never before been seen on a local wine bar menu." The restaurant boasts the largest Swiss selection of wines not just on Long Island, but in the entire United States.

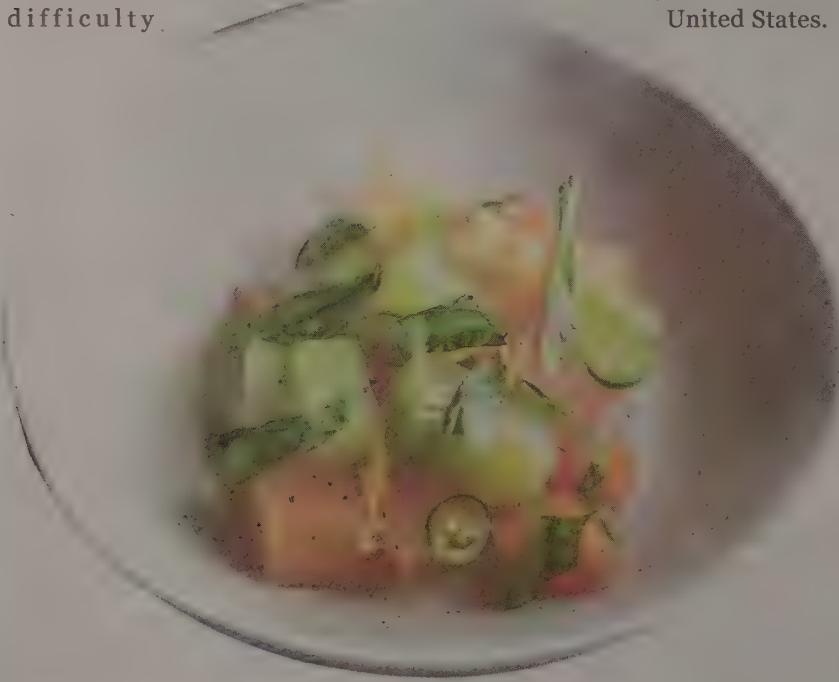

EXECUTIVE CHEF GEORGE MUSHO

Right now, Alpina is twisting its theme to be a bit more summery. "Especially during the summer, channeling the Alps is very difficult," Musho says. "I can't really do a braised beef with polenta when it's 90 degrees out." For this reason, Alpina's menu currently offers mostly light dishes, like mâche salad and chicken liver pâté. In the fall and winter, however, the restaurant will add heartier meals to their menu—stews, polentas, more egg-yolk pastas. This is just part of the reason why the future looks bright for Alpina. Speaking about the opening week of the restaurant, Musho says that it had been exciting getting the word out and serving their first customers. "It's really amazing to see everything come together," he says. "It's been a lot of fun. I've learned a lot. It's been challenging, but it's been great."

Dan's Taste 2021 Chefs Countdown: Erin Abrams, Rooted Hospitality Group

Chef Erin Abrams is coming to Dan's GrillHampton this year to represent the Rooted Hospitality Group—the founders of adored East End restaurants like Cowfish and RUMBA Inspired Island Cuisine & Rum Bar in Hampton Bays and flora in Westhampton Beach, as well as RHUM and AVO TACO further up the island. With so many top-notch Rooted Hospitality Group menus to choose from, it's sure to be an exciting surprise what dish they'll serve at GrillHampton on Friday, August 20.

Where do you draw your inspiration from?

Asian cuisine is my passion; I am inspired by the flavors and the ability to customize this type of cuisine towards a vegan or vegetarian lifestyle.

You can invite three people, living or dead, to your dinner party. Who are they, and what would that meal be?

Anthony Bourdain, Melissa King and Terri Novak—tapas in Europe.

What's your favorite dish to prepare, and do you enjoy eating it as much as preparing it?

Bulgogi Beef—I enjoy preparing it just as much as enjoying it.

What is the best piece of advice you've ever been given?

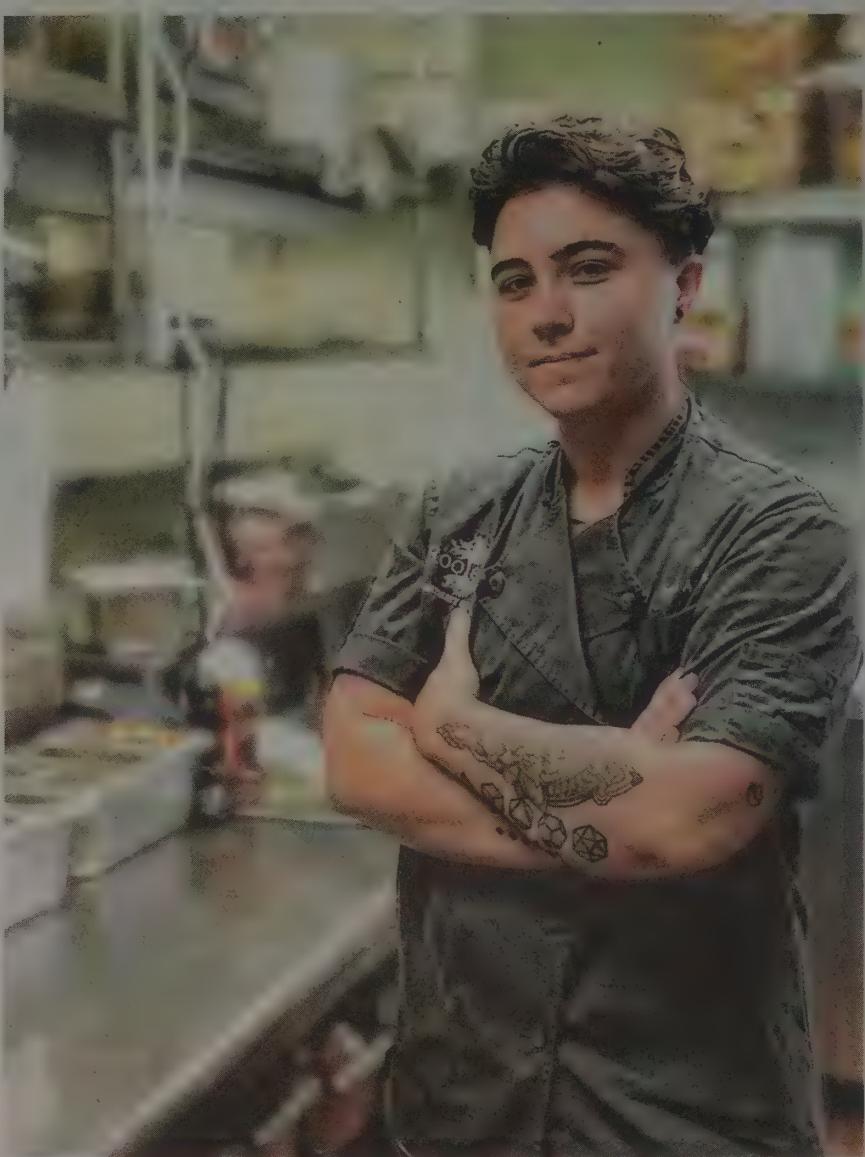

Live what you love.

Who do you most admire in the food/wine world and why?

My brother, because he started from the bottom and worked really hard, was very driven and possessed such a strong admirable work ethic. He is now an executive chef in NYC, and I draw a lot of inspiration from how he carved his path and taught me what he has learned along the way.

What is going to be the “next big thing” on the East End food scene?

Vegan alternatives.

What are your hobbies, passions and interests outside the world of food, wine and work?

Rollerblading, spending time with my family and exploring new restaurants that I haven't tried before.

What's your comfort food and why?

My mom's cranberry pot roast—it is something I have grown up with and it is delicious and comforting.

If you were not in the food or wine business, what would you be doing?

Full-time artist, painting for a living.

thing you've ever tasted?

Tofu steam buns from Koi Kokoro.

What is your go-to karaoke song?

"Spice World: Spice Up Your Life" by the Spice Girls.

It's your last weekend on earth—what's the menu?

Enjoy breakfast, lunch and dinner at wherever the world's best diner is.

HAYLEY BOTTE

While some have experienced the decadent desserts of Hayley Botte's Afragola Dolce at the East Hampton Farmers Market, many will get to take that memorable first bite at Dan's GrillHampton on Friday, August 20. Don't miss out!

Where do you draw your inspiration from?

Nature is what inspires me the most—using food directly from my garden, growing my own edible flowers, things that look wild and untamed, people who appreciate the effort it takes to make food beautiful.

It's also hard to not be inspired whilst traveling, so many simple humble dishes in other countries have been my biggest sources of inspiration. While adventuring in Sweden, cardamom became my new obsession. In Peniche, I was awed by the fisherman I stumbled upon, who had just caught an octopus and was cleaning it on the rocks to prepare for guests (Yes, I was invited to be a guest!) at his local restaurant. In a small town in Napoli, where my great grandparents were from, we were enthusiastically and invitingly “pulled” into a small sidewalk restaurant minutes after getting off the local train from Napoli. As soon as we sat down, Don Giovanni brought us antipasto, pizza, fried broccoli rabe, fried bread peppers, escarole and olives, followed by pizza margherita, individual plates of spaghetti vongole, a giant plate of fritto di paranza, followed by fresh watermelon.

I draw inspiration from these experiences as they align with me, help me to recognize what peace, joy, beauty and love feel like for me which helps me pour the same feeling, taste, music, textures and music into to new recipes, interactions with others, and to paint a life journey for me that makes my heart and soul smile.

You can invite three people, living or dead, to your dinner party. Who are they, and what would that meal be?

Brad Leone, Ina Garten and my grandpa. One of my favorite pasta dishes to make is aglio e olio. My family adds walnuts and shaved black peri-gold truffles (when in season) to the top, although so simple, this is one of my all time favorite dishes!

What's your favorite dish to prepare, and do you enjoy eating it as much as preparing it?

It is such a therapeutic pastime when designing my custom cakes. I put so much attention to detail, right down to growing my own edible flowers in my backyard to decorate my cakes with. My current favorite cake is our strawberry cake made with local berries. It's only available until the end of strawberry season, which is short lived, so needless to say it's very special. Layers of strawberry cake with fresh strawberry filling and strawberry buttercream. I especially love the different shapes, sizes and stems local grown berries have, they bring new life to the top of the cake, it's gorgeous. As a big fan of strawberries, I love to enjoy this cake almost as much as I like to prepare it—it screams summer!

Dan's Taste 2021 Chefs Countdown: Hayley Botte, Afragola Dolce

Share your funniest, most unforgettable or oddest kitchen incident.

Before working as a food stylist, I was a production assistant and was cleaning up the studio kitchen after a job. I picked up a blender on top of a marble cutting board and did not account for how heavy the marble would be. The board dropped, the blender shattered and a shard of glass flew up and cut my arm open. I was rushed to the hospital and got stitches and even had to wear a cast to heal. I was left with a pretty gnarly scar. Moral of the story is to ask for help and always remember how heavy marble is.

Who do you most admire in the food/wine world and why?

Laura Muthesius and Nora Eisermann, a food styling and photography team based in Berlin. They tell stories through food which is something I try to invoke in my work as well; not just enticing people to place orders or buy something, but to make them feel something.

What is going to be the “next big thing” on the East End food scene?

More and more plant-based and gluten-free options everywhere. Organic, plant-based and farm-to-table eateries that are accessible to everyone, like it is in Southern Italy and other European countries. And Afragola Dolce!

What are your hobbies, passions and interests outside the world of food, wine and work?

When in Portugal one summer, I grew a love for surfing. I love hiking, gardening, cooking for fun, styling photoshoots, painting abstract designs. I actually studied visual communications in college where I grew a love for branding and graphic design. I use these skills almost every day while growing my business.

What is the most memorable thing you've ever tasted?

Definitely sfogliatelle in Naples. My family grew up eating them often, but it was a sweet experience tasting how different these tasted in Italy. The ricotta filling is beyond fresh and stuffed between the shatteringly crunchy layers of dough. I can taste it just thinking about it.

What recent travels have you taken that have inspired you?

Two summers ago, I traveled to the Aeolian Islands off of Sicily. They're a quiet group of islands that Italians travel to for holiday in the summertime; it's easy to feel like a local here. The tastes of the small town of Malfa, Salina, Sicily are stunningly simple and burning with the pride that locals have for their cuisine—pistachio aranchini, caponata, fried calzones and so much local seafood. I cannot wait to visit this secret gem again.

What do you consider your greatest achievement?

Learning how to grow food directly from the seed, nurture it and watch it grow.

What's a unique kitchen ritual you practice?

When working in the kitchen, I need to blast music in order to get into the workflow, but at home I have a guilty pleasure of watching The Real Housewives when I cook.

What has surprised you the most about working in the East End culinary scene?

I'm just getting my feet wet working on the East End, but one thing that was a pleasant surprise is how receptive and appreciative the community has been to making plant-based and gluten-free desserts. I think a lot of it is that they understand the importance of sourcing organic quality ingredients—you can taste the difference for sure.

It's your last weekend on earth—what's the menu?

Where to begin! I have a gluten intolerance sadly, but if it was my last weekend on earth, I would most definitely be eating one or two or seven slices of pizza. Some of my favorite places are Scarr's on Orchid, Blade + Salt in Montauk and MKT in Long Beach Island. There is also this little place on the side of the road in Hampton Bays called Taqueria Mi Pueblito. Everything is super authentic and insanely delicious—I live for their al pastor tacos, you can never order enough. Of course, I would have to indulge in an Afragola Dolce original cake. It's hard to choose but the carrot cake and the double chocolate are my all-time favorites.

Up at Bat:

In recognition of Dan's presenting sponsorship of the East Hampton Artists & Writers Charity Softball Game on August 21, we are giving local artists and writers a free rein to write whatever they want in this space for the summer.

MAGDA LETS LOOSE

Sometimes a person with dementia gets sweeter. But Magda did not get sweeter; she got meaner. One day, she said to Sandra, "Don't you ever get tired of being a fat slob?"

To hear someone say that out loud is shocking. And to hear it from your therapist is, well, beyond belief. But there we were, in group therapy, completely unaware of the fact that the woman with whom we entrusted our innermost secrets for years, was sinking into senility.

Sometimes Magda would fall asleep during the session and we'd just go ahead and manage on our own. At first, we tried to wake her up. Then we realized it was safer when she was asleep. Her comments were downright nasty.

"Where did you get that top?" she said to Vera. "At a yard sale in the city dump?" To Linda, who was just thrown over by her married lover, she said, "Well, if you insist on screwing another woman's husband, you get what you deserve."

What was coming next? The fear in the room was palpable. Who was the next target? It was Rhonda. Rhonda, who always sat with one arm over her head clinging to the wall, was now holding onto that wall for dear life. "Why are you so dull?" Magda asked her. "Don't you ever have anything interesting to say?"

It was all very confusing because, in fact, Sandra was obese, and Linda was sleeping with someone's husband, and God knows, everyone was silently aghast at Vera's "Halloween-esque" outfits. No one suspected the truth. We just knew Magda was right, as usual. In fact, to add to the confusion, she really was just a nastier version of her earlier self. It was not that much of a stretch to hear her telling everyone exactly what she thought. That was her M.O.

"Are you on drugs?" she asked me, early in my therapy. "What a witch," I thought. I took a Nexium this morning. How did she know?

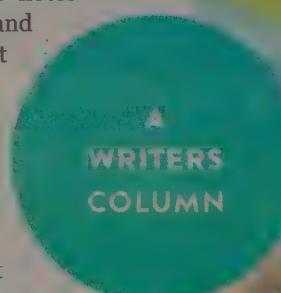

Magda took copious notes during the sessions, and I often wondered what the hell she was writing, but I was too scared to ask. She had an imposing demeanor like some kind of Germanic policewoman, and I just let things slide. One time I told her that my husband would send her a check and she rose from her chair and hovered over me like a giant bat and said, "Don't be coy with me, miss. You will pay for your own therapy." After that, you can rest assured that I wrote every check.

The thing I liked about Magda and what kept me there was that she was the opposite of my family. I was raised in an undisciplined environment by a big, affectionate family. My mother was the queen of unconditional love and as a result, I had no boundaries and didn't know which way to turn half the time. This one, Magda, was strict. No gray areas for her. She knew the answer. Should I drop the idea of being a TV producer and go to law school? Absolutely not. "You don't have the attention span for that." Check. What about this guy I'm dating? Should I see him again? "No. He's not for you. Too stupid." Check. She probably prevented a disaster.

She even involved herself in real estate decisions. Should I buy the apartment when the building goes coop? "Of course, you should. You will double your investment." And so on and so forth. Who could resist that?

In a way, she was right out of the authoritarian's playbook. Just march to this tune and everything will be OK. I figured out how to get the most out of this treatment: Whenever I had a decision to make or when I came to a fork in the road, I just asked myself, "What would Magda do?" She actually helped me a lot.

One day she confused me for someone else in the group. Vera was always talking about her mother, who was dead at least 30 years. Every week, we'd have to hear about Vera's nasty mother who ruined her life. Whenever it was her turn to tell us about her week, she'd "drag" her dead mother into the room. Blah blah blah. My mother did this. My mother did that. So then, when my own mother actually did die, and I informed the group of her passing, Magda said to me, "Oh, you're always talking about your mother." You'd think I would have figured out that she was not all there that day. But I wasn't ready to acknowledge it yet. And at that point, she had me so bamboozled, I wasn't sure if I was always talking about my mother.

As time went on, Magda's behavior got worse. She forgot everything. She even forgot to charge us for the sessions. It was bad. But no one left the group.

She had us hypnotized. We even admired her ability to fall asleep so easily, thinking "Look at that, so free of anxiety that she can nod off as if she just got a 90 minute massage." But; it did make me wonder if she wasn't fast asleep during the private sessions as she was silent most of the time while I was yammering on the couch about some Oedipal thing. Is that what they call Freudian analysis? The shrink says nothing while you blab away trying to unravel the tedious puzzle of your life. Or is Freudian analysis just another way of shrinks saying, "Hey,

I need a nap and there's no time like the present."

One day, Rhonda, the wall hugger, walked in late to the session. Rhonda was never, ever late in all the years in this group. This was a woman who alphabetized her bookshelf and organized her sock drawer, and planned a dinner a month ahead. Magda looked at her and said, "Why are you always late?" This was a coup de grace. No. No. No. Rhonda is never late. Never, never, never. This is the first time. Not always! Once! Rhonda started to cry. It's one thing to be told you're boring and have nothing interesting to say. It's another thing for a girl with OCD to be told she's always late. She started to hyperventilate. We turned to Magda to do something, anything, but at that moment, she was fast asleep.

"That did it," I said. "Let's go." We each got up, silently put our coats on and left the room for the last time.

I think of Magda from time to time, and as I write this, I even miss her. After all, very few people will actually tell you the truth.

Joy Behar is a comedian, author and Emmy-winning co-host of ABC's The View. A staged reading of her play Crisis in Queens—starring Annabella Sciorra, Steven Weber and Brenda Vaccaro—will be presented at Guild Hall September 3–4. For tickets, visit guildhall.org.

Racism on the East End

HAMPTONS SOUL

Father Constantine Lazarakis

It's been a year of reckoning in terms of racial equality in the United States of America. The senseless murder of George Floyd rightfully stoked outrage around the world, bringing issues of racial inequality and institutional racism to the focal point of our national discussion. Over a year later, the discussion continues, and unfortunately, like so many of the discussions around the critical challenges facing our country, much of what we say and believe about racism is reductive, over simplified and frankly, insufficient. We exchange platitudes within our echo chambers to either dismiss the problem or make ourselves feel that we are addressing it. To make real progress is to do more.

First, we need to admit, to ourselves, that racism is real, and it is here. On the East End, while there are real and meaningful efforts to address racial inequality, one doesn't need to look very hard or listen very carefully to know that there are still strong currents of racial prejudice that influence our thinking, restrict and poison our relationships, and wield unfair influence over what opportunities are afforded members of our community.

But we need to look even deeper than the racism that exists in the Hamptons and find the prejudices that exist within ourselves. The economic and social evils brought about by racism and bias can't be resolved with economic and social policy alone. At its root, racism is a spiritual problem, and its repercussions will be felt until we can rid our hearts and minds of racist sentiment, both articulate and subtle. God created each of us, in all our diversity, in His image and likeness, and he created us to love one another. If we want to overcome racism in the Hamptons, each of us needs to reckon with that reality.

Rabbi Josh Franklin

An 18th century will from an East Hampton resident records an interesting bequeath-ing request:

"I leave to my grandson Burnet Miller, all my lands, meadows, commonage, and all my right on Montauk, and all stock and cattle, and all wainage and farming tools, and all my books, gun and sword, and my negro Peter and my Indian boy John."

What are slaves doing so far north of the Mason Dixon line? Contrary to popular belief, enslaved people worked on the farms and in the homes of numerous families on Long Island, and throughout New York until slavery was officially abolished in New York State in 1827. Recent documentation uncovered by the Plain Sight Project has unearthed the stories of enslaved residents who worked throughout the Hamptons as farm hands, carpenters and servants in the homes of their masters. In reading their stories, I was most surprised to see that many of the family names who owned slaves in the Hamptons, are not coincidentally the street names in East Hampton that I drive down on a regular basis: Hedges, Dayton, Buell, Huntting and Osborne. The remnants of slavery exist in plain sight in the Hamptons, most people just don't look.

The skeletons of our Hamptons closet aren't just ancient, they are more recent than we think. Only this past May was legislation passed helping homeowners remove racist restrictive covenants from deeds. These covenants were widespread on the East End, and barred people of color and Jews from living in certain homes and neighborhoods. Although they were technically unenforceable in the wake of the Fair Housing Act of 1968, their presence has left a legacy that has caused the Hamptons to be racially segregated in many areas.

If you wonder why so many people find it important to recite the phrase "Black lives matter," it's because for the majority of American history, our country legislated that Black lives didn't matter at all or mattered less. The past isn't just the past. The bigotry of our history has laid the foundation for the current systematic racism that we find in our country, and even in our East End community.

We'll hit the beach later

The Hamptons lions are coming!

This World Lion Day, August 10th, the African Community and Conservation Foundation (ACCF) and Tusk are debuting the U.S. 'Tusk Lion Trail' to benefit the people and wildlife of Africa. Following the success of the 2018 Tusk Rhino Trail, the England-based organization Tusk, of which Prince William is a Royal Patron, is set to launch this new worldwide art installation tour that will see 45 life-sized lion sculptures released onto the streets of London, Edinburgh, Bristol, Sydney, Wellington, Nairobi and The Hamptons, the tour's one and only U.S. location.

While placing more than 40 identical sculptures around the world would undoubtedly earn some headlines, Tusk has taken the concept a step further by inviting globally acclaimed talents, such as Rolling Stones guitarist Ronnie Wood, to design each of the lions. Each of these lion sculptures has been generously supported by an ACCF or Tusk partner or supporter.

For the 12 lions being released into The Hamptons, collectively called "The Hamptons Lion Pride" and led by ACCF, emphasis was placed on selecting lauded local artists and designers, as well as iconic locations for each sculpture, and the full list is nothing short of a love letter to the East End. Paton Miller and John Banovich will have their lions placed at Wölffer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack, Beth O'Donnell at Southampton Arts Center in Southampton Village and William Quigley at AB NY Gallery in East Hampton. In Water Mill, Kevin McEvoy's lion can be spotted at Duck Walk Vineyard, with Roberto Dutesco and Jeremy Penn's lions at Nova's Ark Project. And in Amagansett, Dan Rizzie's lion can be found in Amagansett Square, while LUVELL's is located at The Stephen Talkhouse. Deborra-Lee Furness and Oscar Jackman are collaborating on a lion for Montauk Beach House in Montauk, as are Donna Karan and Xio Grossert on one lion at Urban Zen and Elizabeth Jordan for additional lion located in Sag Harbor.

As if this unique event wasn't already fun and engaging for the whole family, the art installations encourage visitors to follow the trails using interactive QR codes and easy-to-use physical and digital maps, enticing tour-goers to "collect" all 12 lions. Even those living far beyond the Hamptons are encouraged to participate in the tour virtually and donate from anywhere.

"I'm proud that we can be coming to Long Island and to The Hamptons to represent to the world this message of hope for Africa and how we're all one family together making a difference," ACCF's CEO Brady Forseth says, reiterating that anyone, anywhere can participate and donate online if they can't come and see the Hamptons Lion Pride in person. "Anyone who's reading this can play a part to bring hope for the plight of the people and wildlife in Africa!"

The U.S. Tusk Lion Trail sculptures will remain on view through August 25, when they'll begin their journey to the 'Hamptons Lion Soirée' for a fabulous auction put on by Bohnams on Friday, August 27, 6-8 p.m., where each of the 12 lions in the Hamptons Lion Pride will be won by its highest bidder, as will several additional donated artworks. Limited tickets to the VIP private event are $1,000, and bidding takes place online and in person. ACCF and Tusk will direct all auction proceeds and any additional donations to their life-changing, empowering work in Africa. In 2018, Tusk raised £750,000 with its Tusk Rhino Trail, and this year's expanded event should hopefully prove even more successful.

Widely regarded as the king of the animal kingdom, the regal lion's domain has been reduced drastically over many years of poaching, human-lion conflict, prey depletion, habitat loss and fragmentation. In the last 25 years, the lion population has dwindled to 50% of what it once was, with recent reports estimating that the world population of lions is now only about 22,500. At 8% of their historic range, today, there are fewer wild lions left than rhinos.

The African lion population is only one aspect of the work that ACCF does, however, as the people of Africa are also in dire need of assistance due to the amplified effects of the COVID-19 pandemic on the continent. "One of the largest contributing factors to Africa's economy is hospitality/tourism," says Forseth, "and when you have hospitality, for the most part, being shut down throughout the continent, you're going to have increased poaching pressure on wildlife and the livelihoods of the communities."

"The lion is the face of the campaign, but it's not just for the wildlife—these endangered animals," adds ACCF Vice President, Pete Mattson. "It's also for the people, which is why in 'African Community and Conservation Foundation,' community is first. We want to help the people, help the wildlife—the circle of life, really—and the planet at the same time and really work at it from all angles." A few of these angles necessary to restore and advance these communities are economic stability, technological innovation, and increased empowerment."

"It really is about the people, too—helping the people," Mattson continues. "They've been rocked in Africa through this global pandemic, and they're still getting rocked. This is a relief effort and a really cool celebration that we can do through art to raise a lot of awareness and money to do long-term impact, versus handouts. That's what we're really all about: Sustainable long-term impact."

ACCF's portion of the U.S. 'Tusk Lion Trail' proceeds will be donated to The Malilangwe Trust, a Zimbabwean non-profit leading environmental conservation and uplifting communities. Its goal: "To restore and maintain the reserve's ecosystem, make meaningful contributions to conservation science and improve the livelihoods of its neighboring communities."

For more information about the U.S. Tusk Lion Trail, visit us.tuskliontrail.com. This event is made possible thanks to support from sponsors including: Urban Zen, The Padded Wagon, Nova's Ark Project, Wölffer Estate Vineyard, Duck Walk Vineyard, Alli McCartney of Alignment Partners at UBS Financial Services, Dr. Taryn Marie Stejskal of Resilience Leadership Institute, EarthX, Emso Asset Management, Evan Pollack, Graylly LLC, the Todd Family, James Davies and Alex Giannou of Deutsche Bank, Make Everything Workshop, Ninety One, Rhonda Vetere, Sandi Young of Butterfly Effect, Teneo, Bohnams, DHL Express and ISPS Handa UK.

Gimme Shelter Animal Rescue to Celebrate 10-Year Anniversary

BY ANGELA LAGRECA

Anyone who loves animals knows it takes a special person to rescue, foster and adopt.

For Michelle Neufeld Montak, who says she "loves animals more than most people," the decision to form Gimme Shelter Animal Rescue was inspired 12 years ago at a friend's fundraiser for a local animal rescue.

"I stopped by to give a donation and to say hello, and that event changed my life," says Montak, who had been selling real estate in Toronto where she grew up.

"I found out how many dogs are dying in shelters all across the country—I just couldn't believe it ... how many dogs were being killed in gas chambers all across the South—it was absolutely horrific, so I started volunteering and I literally felt like I found my passion."

Montak's first trip to the Hamptons 13 years ago proved to be a prophetic one. While visiting a girlfriend's share house for the weekend, she met her now husband Eddie Montak. Eddie, who owns a contracting business, was living in the city and had a house in the Hamptons. After a couple of years of long-distance dating, the couple got engaged and decided to live together out east because "it was the best fit" for the other love of Michelle's life—her dog, Otis—"a big, black, fluffy, sheepy dog, a border collie-husky mix," says Montak, with affection.

While waiting for her working papers, Montak would take Otis around as she familiarized herself with the area and her new home.

"All the towns and the stores were so welcoming," says Montak. "It was such a nice change from Toronto in that way—they all welcomed Otis ... everyone fell in love with him—he was so zen and he was definitely an old soul, a very spiritual, sweet dog ... I met a lot of dog lovers that way and that's kind of how it all started."

After volunteering at a local rescue, eight months later Montak founded Gimme Shelter in December of 2011. The rescue "took over life" and she never looked back on real estate.

BARBARA LASSEN

When the doors open to the transport van that arrives every Saturday in Commack with the rescues and the fosters and the adopters come forward, it is very emotional. ... The dogs all started off in such bad situations, and they are going to have great lives.

"When I first started, I didn't have a foster network, I didn't have donors," says Montak. "I just had friends who loved dogs and believed in what I was doing."

She started to "literally save one dog at a time."

"I would see dogs on Facebook or online, or I would see dogs down South that were in a shelter that were about to die, and I would just call the shelter and say 'Is there a vet nearby that I can pay for vetting and shots? ... Is there a volunteer nearby that can bring the dog out of the shelter to the vet?' I paid for the boarding, and I paid for all the vetting—and my very generous friends all chipped in," says Montak.

But once she rescued a dog, where would she keep it? That was her dilemma early on with a rescue named

EAST END BUSINESS

Emma, "a sweet little black Lab who was at a shelter down South who had been wandering on the street with her two newborn puppies."

After Montak rescued the Lab trio, a friend of hers who worked at Ralph Lauren sent out an email blast to her contacts to effort a foster and that led to Montak meeting Chuck and Ellen Scarborough. Not only did the Scarboroughs end up fostering Emma, "they fell in love with her and adopted her," says Montak. "The Scarboroughs became big supporters, hosting our summer fundraiser out here at their house in Southampton," she says. "They are amazing people."

Word of mouth helped and the rescue grew.

"A lot of friends who are huge dog lovers started the website and it just took off, and people started adopting from us and telling their friends and then other families decided that it was a nice thing to do, especially for their kids. ... They are teaching them to care for another living creature, to provide love and comfort and to be actually able to see it go to a wonderful home and then do it again," says Montak.

There have been challenging days. "For the first three years, the transport van that brought the rescues up from the South wasn't even coming to Long Island," says Montak, so she would get up at 5 a.m. every Saturday and drive with a friend in her minivan from the Hamptons to pick up the rescues in New Jersey at a service area.

"It was all-consuming," says Montak who describes her work as "very rewarding and very stressful. ... It's also very heartbreakingly on a daily basis because I can't save every dog I see or hear of." She says she often works 24/7, adding, "My husband Eddie has been extremely tolerant ... I've been a workaholic for 10 years now."

To date, Montak has saved almost 3,000 rescues. At any given time she has 70–80 dogs in her care, between the ones down South at the kennel that she pays to board, and the dogs up here with her network of fosters.

"When the doors open to the transport van that arrives every Saturday in Commack with the rescues and the fosters, and the adopters come forward, it is very emotional," says Montak. "The dogs all started off in such bad situations, and they are going to have great lives."

Because Gimme Shelter is an all-breed rescue, that means all types of dogs (and ages) are rescued. "Stockard Channing adopted a pit bull several years ago," says Montak. "She was super cool, a total pit bull lover and we saved him off death row." Julianne Moore started following the website and she and her husband Bart Freundlich adopted a black Lab.

No matter who applies to foster or adopt, the aim is the same for Montak:

"To make sure we find the best home for each dog and we also find the right dog for each person." She describes her fosters as "very special people."

"When a foster ends up taking the dog, we call them a 'foster failure,'" says Montak, adding, "We laugh at it ... it's a beautiful thing for the dog because it doesn't have to move and readjust to a new home, but for us, every foster is like gold—they are precious."

As for the future, Montak would like to build on what she has created.

"The goal," says Montak, "is to have a shelter out here in the Hamptons so that we can save more dogs ... if we could find someone out here to give us some land and then I can fundraise for the shelter—that would be a dream come true."

ELLEN AND CHUCK SCARBOROUGH

KRISTIN GRAY

For now, the rescue work continues.

"I love what I do beyond measure," adds Montak. "I've met some extremely special humans through my rescue work. I feel deeply grateful and truly humbled to have such incredible supporters and friends. And that I get to dedicate my life to saving so many precious, magical souls."

Louis Licari: Celebrity Colorist and 'Ambush Makeover' Star Has a Pop-up Salon in Water Mill

BY ANGELA LAGRECA

When world-famous hair colorist Louis Licari plucks a deserving woman from the TODAY show plaza for an "Ambush Makeover," he and his team of beauty experts literally make dreams come true.

"We take these ladies who have no access to the whole idea of coming to a New York hairdresser or colorist and have (their hair) and their makeup done," says Licari. "They are just so excited to get the makeover—it's really a thrill," adds Licari, who along with his ambush team (Licari on color, Gad Cohen the hairstylist and Enid O' the makeup artist) complete the transformation. "I'm not being corny here—they get so juiced—it's really a great thing," says Licari.

The "Queen for a Day" makeover moment never leaves a dry eye, and Ambush Makeover—which has had to take a break from the in-person makeover due to COVID and no audience allowed at the NBC plaza (something that Licari says will hopefully change in September)—has been a wildly popular segment on the 10 a.m. hour of the TODAY show for over 13 years.

Licari admits he gets "more than a little buzz about being on the show" and has been a recurring guest and contributor on the TODAY show "for at least 25 years," he estimates.

"Katie Couric brought me in," Licari says. "I would do her color and we had (and have) a relationship ... she said 'Do you want to do a segment?' That's how it all started."

Dubbed "The King of Color" by The New York Times, Licari's career has spanned over 30 years of servicing clients on two coasts, owning major salons on Fifth Avenue in New York and Beverly Hills in California, traveling the world for clients and product development and working on movie sets doing special effects for hair. He also has a Louis Licari product line that is set to launch in Asia.

These days Licari—whose celebrity clientele includes Susan Sarandon, Jessica Lange, Robert De Niro, Sofia Coppola and Al Pacino—is working weekdays with clients in New York at Mizu Louis Licari (on Park Avenue and 59th Street), and on Fridays and Saturdays he drives out east to work with clients in the Hamptons at a pop-up salon in Water Mill.

Licari has been working at the pop-up salon, "near the windmill in Water Mill" since the winter—an opportunity that literally popped up after so many of his clients who had come out to the Hamptons during the height of COVID had asked him to come out to their homes to color their hair—something Licari says he doesn't like to do, "It's just too messy to be in a private home." A chance encounter with a blast from Licari's past made the pop-up possible:

"I ran into a fellow on the street—one of the guys I used to shampoo for (when Licari was just starting out) and I was talking to him and he said, 'Louis, I have a salon out there, and I don't even use it. Would you like to use it? You can have it on weekends.' And I said, "That's sounds like a plan ... "

We caught up with Louis Licari to talk about his experience working out east, his career path and, of course, to ask for some hair tips and trends.

How is it going at the Water Mill pop-up salon?

It has been doing extremely well. It's an intimate, beachy salon, a totally different vibe than New York. ... It's a small operation but it's booked solid more than a couple of weeks in advance, so it's really golden.

How did you get your start—did you envision being a hair colorist?

I went to art school at Syracuse University. I came to New York to make it as a struggling painter—it never really worked, and I went into this as a way to hold things over for a while.

I never even knew there was a "hair colorist." My first job was as a shampoo boy. I realized when I was at Pierre Michel, "Oh, there's a hair colorist," and said, "Oh, I can do that."

Where did you grow up—and how did you end up working in the salon scene?

I grew up in Upstate New York, in a small town outside Syracuse, Fairmont Hill.

I was biting at the bit since I was a kid to go to New York. Where else would a painter go? There's nothing worse than feeling like the square peg in the round hole, and in New York I could find my place.

After two or three years of painting, I saw all my friends with more traditional careers were moving up the ladder, and I was struggling as a waiter, losing my mind. I just had to do something. I couldn't serve one more hamburger or one more veal piccata. ... I went to beauty school during the week, worked on the weekends as a waiter, and that's how it all started.

How did you break through to become a celebrity colorist?

Things really took off when I worked at Le Coupe, which was on Madison Avenue. By the time I was probably 30 years old I opened my own place on Madison and 67th called the Louis Licari Color Group.

I did every single model in New York, and because I did Eileen Ford and from doing the girls, all of a sudden one day Robert De Niro called me up and he said, "I need you to make my hair gray for a movie." After him I started doing everybody—when you got him it was like the ace card and the rest of the deck followed.

What is so important about hair color?

Hair color is your most important fashion accessory. It is the easiest way to look more vital, beautiful, fashionable and younger. The best part of hair color is it usually takes less than an hour and doesn't wash off.

What hair color techniques do you use or recommend?

There is a hair color technique for everyone. An overall color change requires a single process. This is best if you want to make your hair lighter, darker, warmer or more ash.

Highlights are my favorite and most natural way to lighten and brighten hair. Highlights have changed over the years. Today's highlights are a mix of thin and thick strokes of color. They are more subtle at the root and become brighter at the ends of the hair. The best part of today's highlights? They grow out incredibly gracefully and only need to be touched up every three to four months.

Glazes have become increasingly popular this year. They do not contain peroxide and actually condition the shine. This is the easiest way to add a pinch of color and a whole lot of shine.

What is the biggest mistake people make in terms of their hair?

Trying to do something extreme at home ... it almost never works. If you are doing it at home, you've got to keep it very simple. The color you are born with usually works best with your skin color so you should stay close to it.

Do you believe in keratin treatments?

Keratin saves a lot of ladies ... I don't do them myself ... it certainly makes life a lot easier. The mistake with keratin is overuse. I know people that do it every two months when it should be done every five to seven months.

How does it feel to be out east?

I was never really a "Hamptons guy" ... it's different when you have a place there. ... I took a guesthouse on Halsey, I'm right behind the Windmill. I walk to work a block north—the other way it's two blocks to Mecox Bay. I go paddle boarding almost every day I'm out there—that's my new thing, and I love it to death. ... The house is beautiful, my little puppy Isabella is with me all the time. ... I live on the quieter side ... and I'm enjoying this part of my life. ... It's a pretty sweet life.

Any quick hair tips for summer?

The sun can be your friend if you use it in moderation—just remember that what works in the summer when your skin has that golden brown tan might not work in the winter, so it's best to be aware of what the sun is doing—and if it does get too brassy—we're ready, by the way. It can all be repaired in the fall.

The bigger concern is that you should always keep your hair properly conditioned so that it can take the color—hair in bad condition doesn't color as well as hair in good condition.

What's your favorite part of your day?

At this point I've been in the business so long it's like seeing your friends—it's like I have house guests every day. ... I get excited about certain colors I do. I have to get creative with the color. But day to day—being with people, seeing them—that's my favorite part.

Peace of Mind:

One Ocean Property Management Lets Homeowners Relax

GETTY IMAGES

Home ownership is a key component of the American dream, but even for those lucky enough to live on the East End, the reality is that maintaining a house is a lot of work.

Here to ease that burden so homeowners can spend quality time without worry is One Ocean Property Management, a Southampton-based company that specializes in keeping estates running smoothly from the ground up.

We spoke to Gabriel Luis Narvaez, who founded the company, about why he takes a hands-on approach, what sets One Ocean apart, and what new trends he's seeing.

How did you get started in this line of work?

I started out doing irrigation for Hampton Irrigation, which later transitioned into low-level outside lighting, which then went into landscaping and then property management. Being that I was on the property all the time, clients were asking me for referrals, I figured I should go into business for myself and start my own property management company. A lot of the time clients prefer an all-around company. They prefer to do business with one company as opposed to multiple companies. That's what clients like most about our company. We offer a little bit of everything.

What sets your company apart from the competition?

I'm hands-on as opposed to most bosses who just sit there and send their guys out every morning. Nine times out of 10 it will be me responding and then once I diagnose the situation I can then hand off to someone else in the company, and we're all on the same page. Plus, I am a Southampton local and a majority of my friends are in the trades, so it's always easier tapping one of them as opposed to the main company because at this time if you need a contractor it's a two-week minimum.

Can you elaborate on some of the services you provide?

We do the estate care, which is weekly monitoring of your house, we contact all subcontractors that come in to work, we also do landscaping and offer tick and mosquito spraying and handyman services. There's really nothing that we can't do. I also do chauffeur management. I have another business that does airport runs, city pickups, drop offs, things like that.

What new trends are you seeing in the industry?

A lot of companies out here that say they do property management but are more or less just landscaping companies. There are endless service companies.

Do you have any sayings in your line of work?

Your property, our priority.

One Ocean Property Management can be reached at 631-891-8285, info@oneoceanpropertymgmt.com, or visit their helpful website at oneoceanpropertymgmt.com

Home is Where the... Extreme Tick Danger is!

Now that we're all breathing a sigh of relief as COVID-19 ebbs, it turns out we're in the midst of the worst tick season in recent memory. If that isn't scary enough, forecasters say cases of Lyme disease in 2021 will also set records. Last winter was one of the warmest on record. That, combined with waves of hot and humid weather have caused tick populations to explode. Even more significant, are you aware that approximately 70% of people who contract Lyme Disease each year are bitten by ticks in their own yard? And that cases of tick-borne illnesses such as Lyme Disease, Ehrlichiosis, Babesiosis, Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever and Anaplasmosis have more than doubled in the last 15 years? The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that as many as 476,000 Americans are diagnosed with Lyme disease each year. Who knows just how many dangerous, disease-carrying ticks are hiding in tall grass in your yard? Especially this summer, when people who have been homebound and cooped up because of COVID-19 want to get out of the house to garden and spend time in their yards — where the ticks are. Lyme disease or any dangerous tick disease is the last thing you need right now. How can you protect yourself and your family? Call us now. For nearly 25 years, we have provided the most effective, environmentally-responsible year-round tick prevention program possible. So don't take a chance with your family's safety, call East End Tick & Mosquito Control today for a free, no-obligation estimate.

HARDY NOW OFFERS DUCT CLEANING!

Why Should You Get Your Air Ducts Cleaned with Hardy?
Because they get dirty!

Dirt and dust accumulation is found even in the cleanest homes. In addition to everyday living, other factors can lead to an increased need for air duct cleaning:

- Pets
- Occupants with allergies or asthma
- Cigarette or cigar smoke
- Water contamination or damage to the home / HVAC system
- Home renovation or remodeling projects

Some people are more sensitive to these contaminants than others. Allergy and asthma sufferers, as well as young children and the elderly, tend to be more susceptible to the types of poor indoor air quality that air duct cleaning can help address.

Kathy Kuo Home Décor Store

Debuts in Southampton

BY KATHERINE PLOTAS

In a time when retail business is converting from physical to digital, it's a rare feat to see an online company open a brick-and-mortar location, but for Kathy Kuo, however, the creation of an in-person storefront in Southampton is a dream come true and a welcome addition to her growing business.

Kathy Kuo Home has been providing customers with luxury home design and décor, from furniture to floor plans, exclusively online since its beginning. Over the course of the pandemic, as online shopping took off and the company experienced a huge growth in sales, the idea for a physical retail space became a logical next step. And with businesses beginning to reopen and customers eager to return to an in-person shopping experience, Kathy Kuo, the founder and CEO of Kathy Kuo Home, decided that there was no time like the present. Kuo announced in June that the company is set to open its first store this July in Southampton, in none other than a house-like storefront.

"It is incredibly serendipitous and fortuitous that our first home, as a home brand, is 30 Jobs Lane in Southampton," says Kuo.

The space itself is 4,000 square feet, designed to be more like a home than a store. While the space will still carry the brand's best-selling products including furniture, décor and lighting all for indoor and outdoor use, it will also serve as an introductory place for the Kathy Kuo Home upholstery line, and the Kathy Kuo Home Collection, featuring exclusive sofa and pillow designs.

The location also plans to offer digital resources for a combined online and physical shopping experience. Customers can interact with key items on the floor while still having access to the entire product assortment online. But even with the services being offered, Kuo is determined that the space showcases the traits of a home.

"Southampton is such an intuitive fit for the flagship," she says. "The space will immediately captivate and transcend customers into the warm and gorgeous possibilities of home, and immerse them into the unique curatorial services of the Kathy Kuo team."

To help bring her vision to life, Kuo enlisted Melissa Gonzalez, an award-winning retail strategist and experiential designer, and her team at The Lionesque Group, an MG2 Company. Gonzalez has helped high-end brands build human connection in physical spaces for over a decade and is now helping Kuo to create a one-of-a-kind customer experience.

In addition to the services already offered, the company will also have an in-house interior design firm present at the new location along with an in-store designer resource center. Any clients, current or new, would be able to meet one-on-one with a designer and have exclusive access to a library of product swatches and samples. There will also be private seating areas to house client meetings. Private shopping hours are offered for any who want to experience the store independently due to COVID, and appointments can be made on the Kathy Kuo Home website.

The space will also be used for brand partnerships, immersive events and designer pop-ups for both the local community and visitors. While the store is designed to help customers improve their homes in real time, the ultimate goal is to create awareness around the brand while also connecting with customers and supporting local business.

For appointments and info, visit kathykuohome.com/southampton.

HIGH PROFILE

Power Broker:

Bill Ferro

BY TODD SHAPIRO

Bill Ferro has seen it all. As a criminal defense attorney, he has handled myriad high-profile criminal matters, civil rights, civil rights violations and police brutality cases. His time in this world opened his eyes to the best and worst parts of society. But, above all, he believes that the law exists to protect the rights of all people.

In 1989, he founded what is now Ferro, Kuba, Mangano, P.C. and built a well-respected, successful law firm. He also knows a segment of our population that truly needs someone to give them a voice, help them through the complicated legal process and ensure that they are afforded the same rights, representation and education as all citizens. Seeing the growth of Spanish-speaking communities in our area made it clear that there was a tremendous void to be filled. In 2014, Ferro created a full-service branch of the FKM law firm, specifically for the Spanish-speaking immigrant community. That brand is Liga De Justicia.

"The truth is, many immigrants are afraid to go to a lawyer or law enforcement," Ferro says. "They have been told for too many years that they do not have the same rights to safety or protection that others have, and this is simply untrue."

In response, the firm opened its first community-based law center in Brentwood and later, a location in Jackson Heights, Queens. The firm recently opened a location in Riverhead at 180 Old Country Road, the same plaza that is home to the easternmost DMV office.

Many success stories are part of the Liga De Justicia story — one of which was a high-profile case that combined racial profiling, harassment and even deadly force on three Hispanic men.

"There was a robbery at a Taco Bell in Huntington Station, and three Hispanic men fled the crime scene on foot. My clients, three men, were driving home from work," Ferro recounts. "They were pulled over by an overzealous Suffolk police officer, screamed at, accosted, and then the officer wound up shooting into the car, gravely injuring one of the men."

After the incident, the men went to a "prestigious law firm," Ferro says, but were told they should settle for a paltry $250,000.

"That was outrageous, given the severity and discrimination of this case," Ferro notes. "Our firm took over the case, prepared it for trial in federal court, and the case settled during jury selection for $1.5 million. It was the right decision, and we were proud to have gotten them some justice and compensation."

As the Liga De Justicia law practice grew, Ferro knew more had to be done to help the immigrant community. So this past year, he launched two Spanish-speaking internet radio stations that serve Long Island and New York City.

"We wanted to reach as many people as possible, provide trustworthy education and guidance to our listeners," Ferro says.

The stations continue to grow in popularity and have become well-known. But when COVID-19 hit the world, it was clear more needed to be done to help the Spanish-speaking community understand the pandemic, learn what help existed and most of all—how to remain safe.

"The most basic questions had to be answered, so we decided to add to our media platform and continue our mission of being the trusted voice of this community," he explains.

The firm created Liga Media Group, launched a magazine, Nuestra Imagenes, with the first issue solely dedicated to providing COVID information and education. The magazine builds a new bridge to the elected officials, who could use the forum to communicate with their Spanish-speaking constituents. The entire team of Liga Media Group on both the radio and magazine side are Spanish speakers. Additionally, much of the staff of the law firm is Spanish-speaking as well, something Ferro thought was essential to their success.

The firm went into communities and provided thousands of masks, gloves and other PPE required throughout the pandemic. When the vaccine program began, Liga De Justicia held a vaccination drive at their Brentwood location.

"These things helped solidify our position as trustworthy, committed members of the Latino community," Ferro says. "We have great relationships with community leaders and routinely provide legal guidance, representation and assistance for people in need."

Ferro's downtime is usually spent on the East End, a place that he and his family have loved for decades.

"For 25 years, we would vacation in Montauk with our friends," says Ferro. "Our kids grew up going there, spending the day on the beach, going to the Bake Shoppe in the morning, and having ice cream at night."

When COVID began to close up the world, Ferro and his family retreated to a home in Sag Harbor, where they spend their time enjoying the beautiful

BILL FERRO

Hamptons.

"Some of the most beautiful things about Sag Harbor are the simplest things. Like sitting at night watching another incredible Long Island sunset," Ferro shares. "The house brings my family together, which is the most important thing we have."

Estia's Little Kitchen is at the top of the list as far as their favorite Sag Harbor locations. But their favorite may be Cromer's Market. "It is like our headquarters. We love their food, we buy our groceries there—it is an institution."

Ferro says that despite the many changes that have taken place on the East End, one of the best things is that people still support local businesses in the area.

"We buy our bread locally, our eggs, cheese—everything we can," he notes. "Every weekend, we are at the farmers market, buying good food and helping small local businesses thrive."

Even during the most serene moments, watching the sky turn red as the sun falls below the horizon, Ferro thinks about the people who Liga De Justicia represents and wants to do more.

"Everyone wants to be safe, to be healthy, to have a degree of calm and dignity in their lives, and Liga De Justicia is there for them," he adds.
